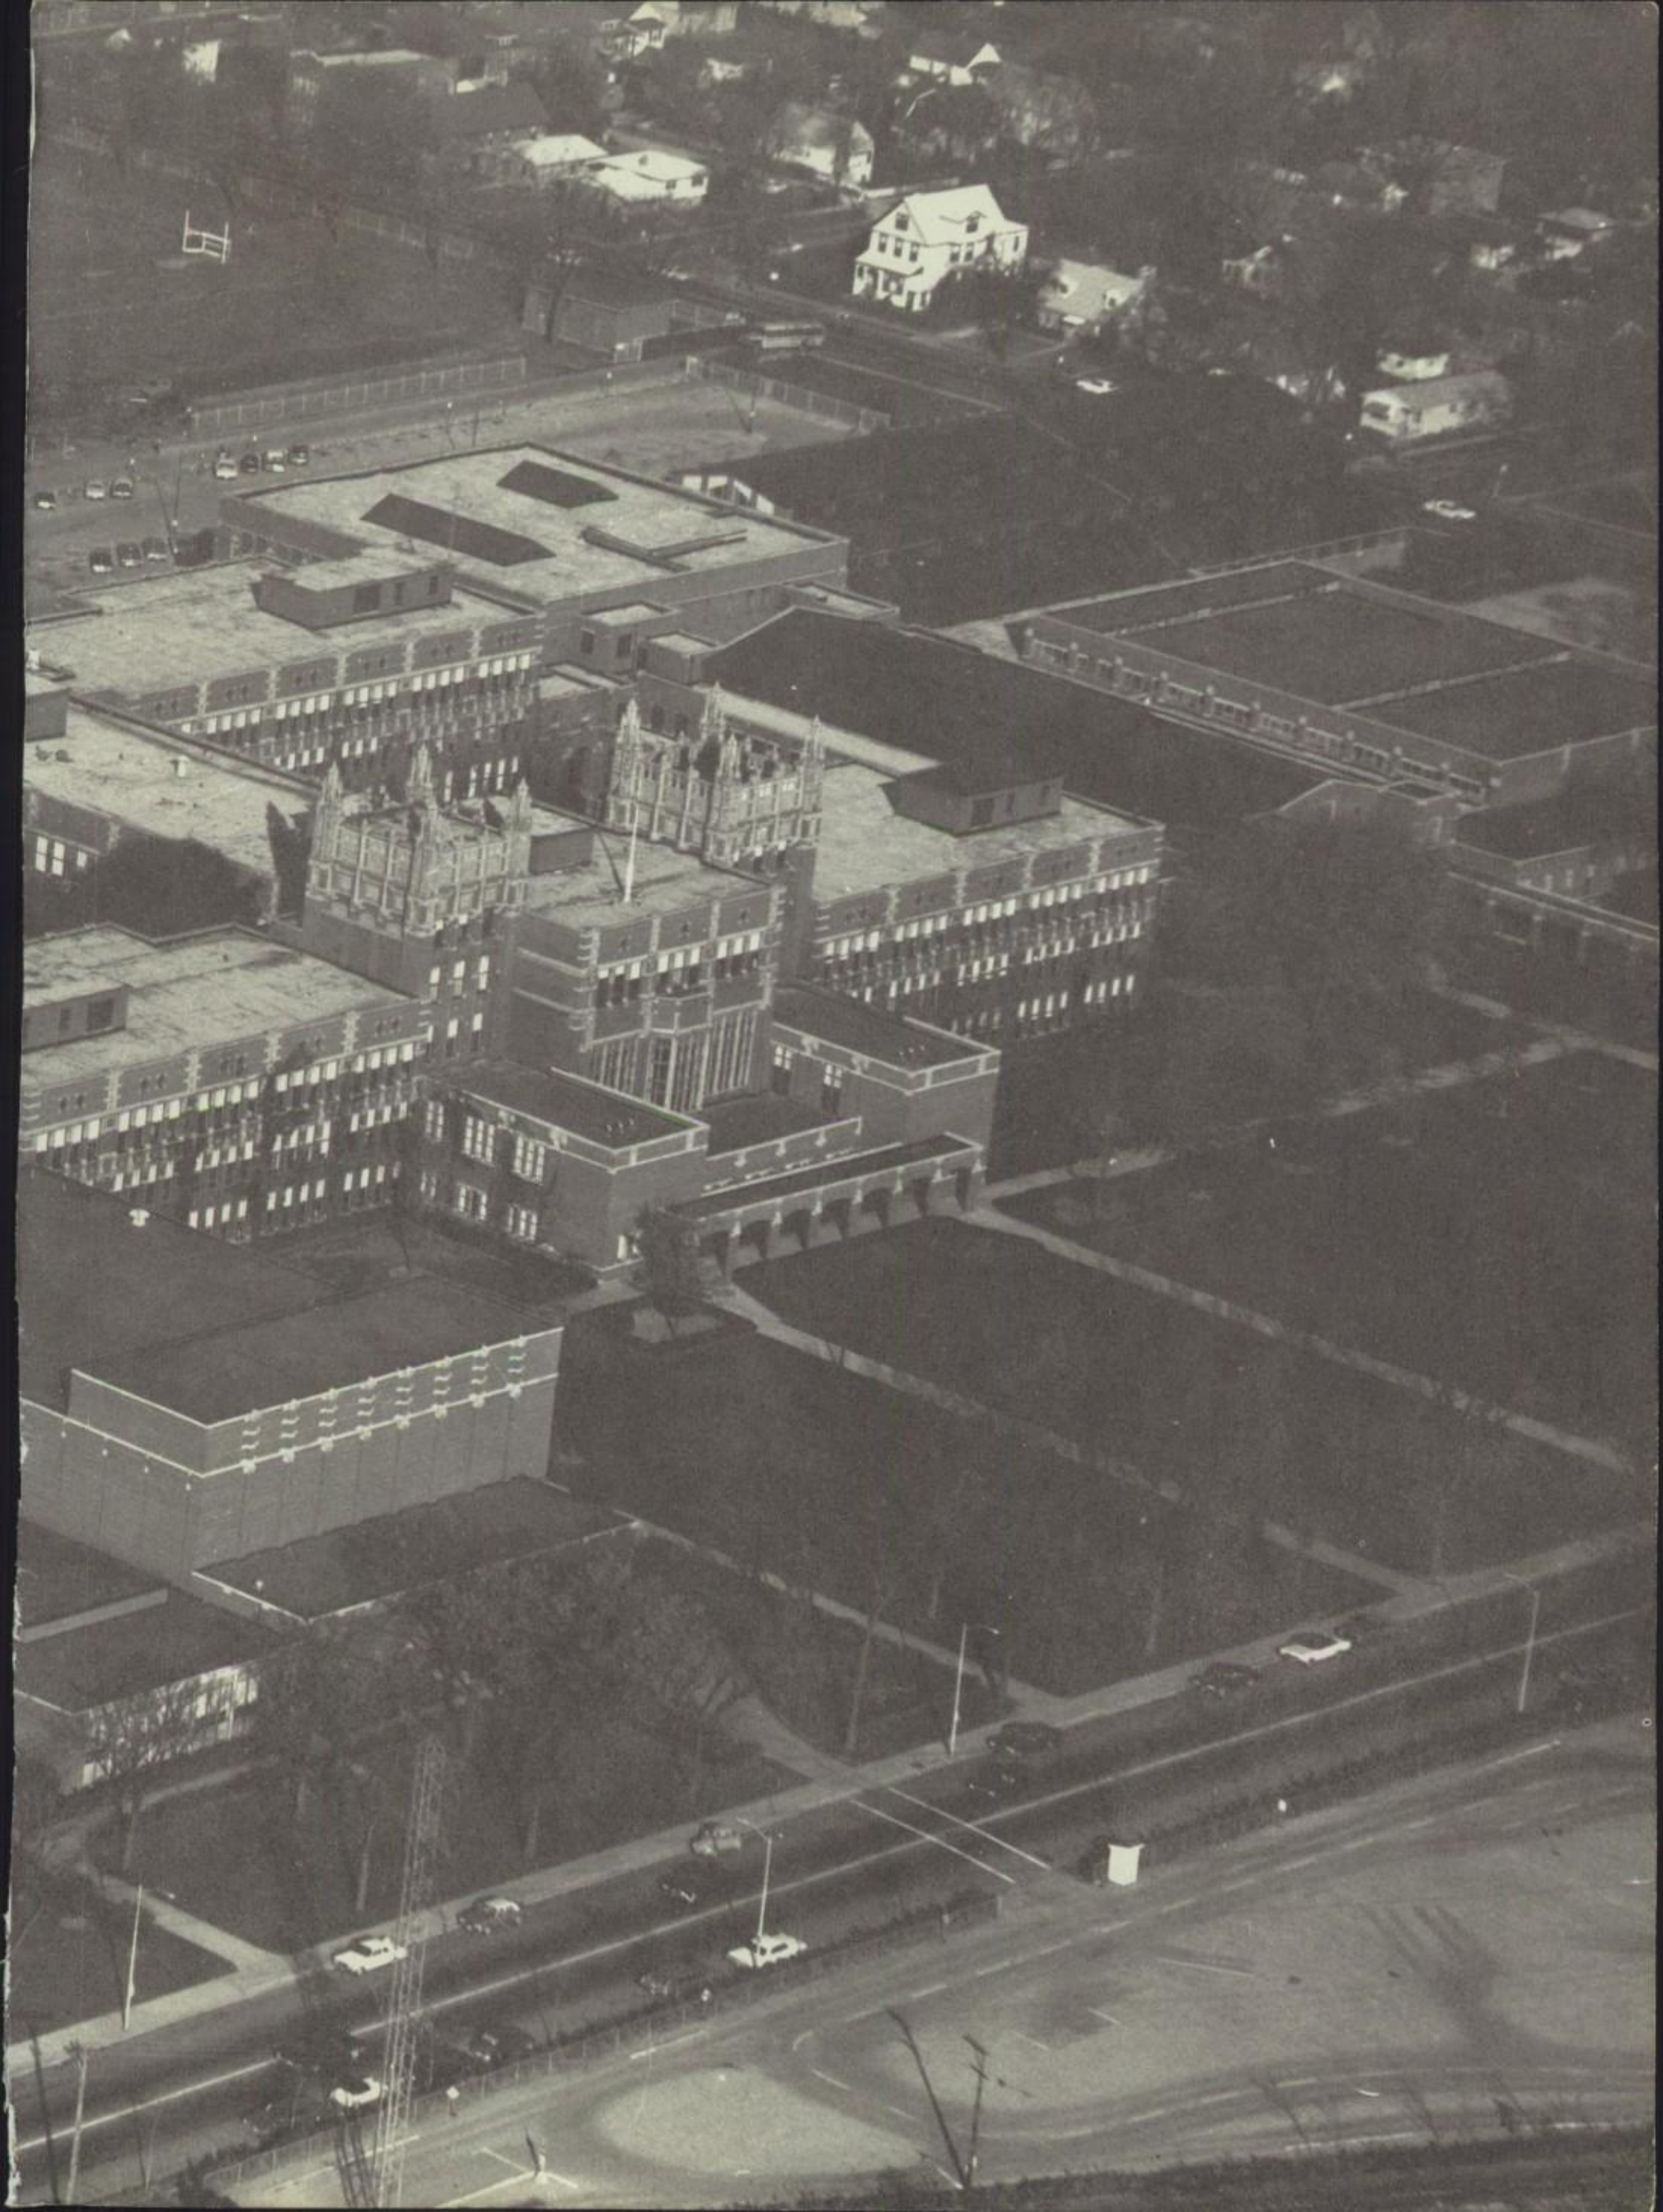
KEY '66



Dear Bob-
Hi! So here we are sitting in the Inferno. Your really a peach! I still think you should ask Kay to go steady. BUT you could never tell him or much as I'd like to call me and I will look forward to seeing you at E. T. H. S. two of Love

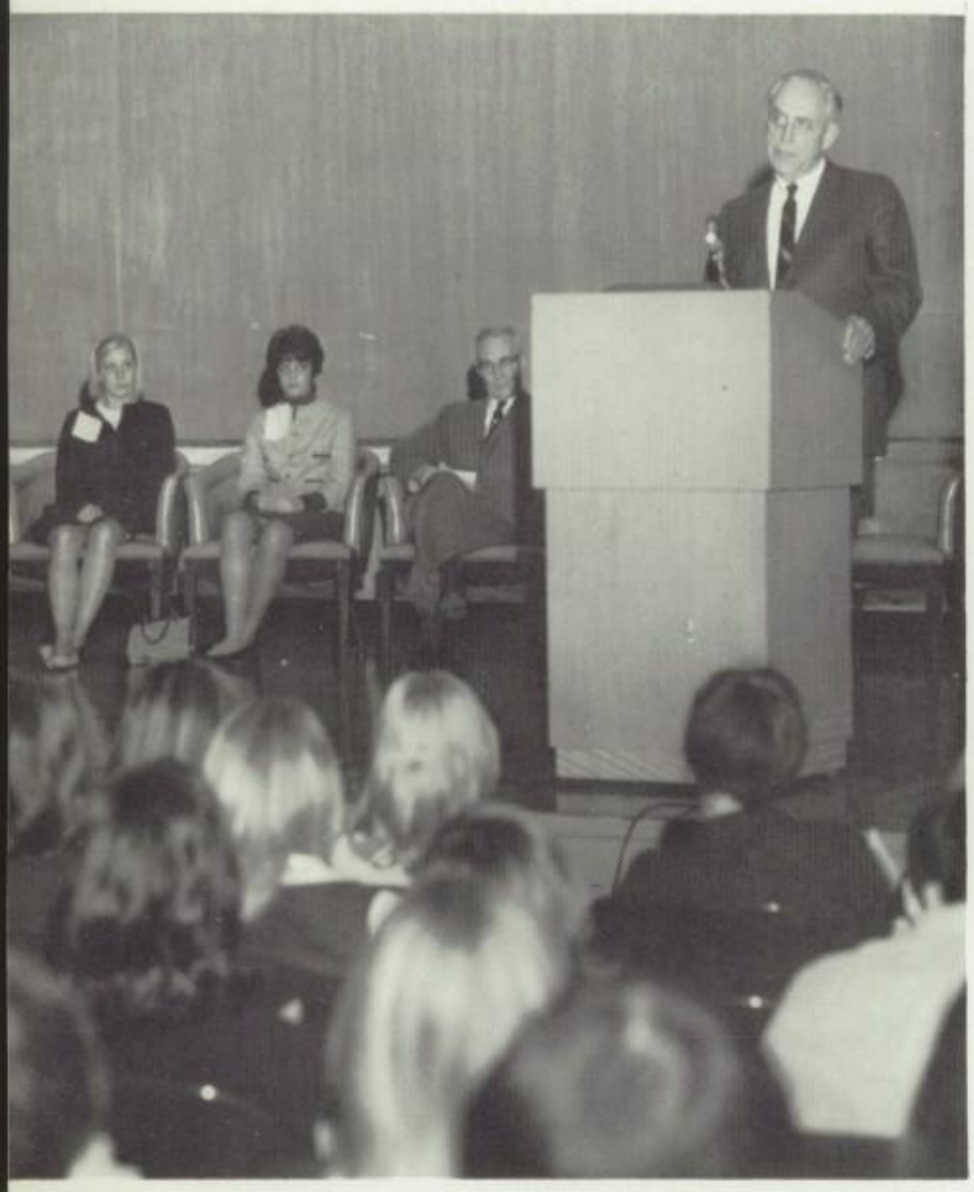
Efforts by Many Improved Our Human Relations

Panelists Robert Scott, Jim Belcher, Rev. Coleman Brown, and Bud Buss discuss "Contrast in Liberty" at a Brotherhood Week program on social prejudice.

An ETHS string ensemble performs at a Foster School assembly, one of a series of programs in music sponsored by the high school at Foster and Central grade schools. Each visiting ensemble performed for 20 minutes, including a solo by one member; then members visited the children's classrooms to demonstrate the instruments at closer range. Woodwind and percussion ensembles and an entire orchestra also performed at the schools.

Students cast ballots in the Central Council primary election.

Miss Vinie Burrows, Broadway actress, presented three one-woman shows to English, social studies, and speech arts classes in February. Her first program, Salute to the Negro Writer, included works by Paul Dunbar, Langston Hughes, Richard Wright, and Gwendolyn Brooks. Dark Fire was a collection of African myths and folklore. Miss Burrows' third presentation was Shout Freedom!, focusing on conflicts between the sexes, races, and generations.

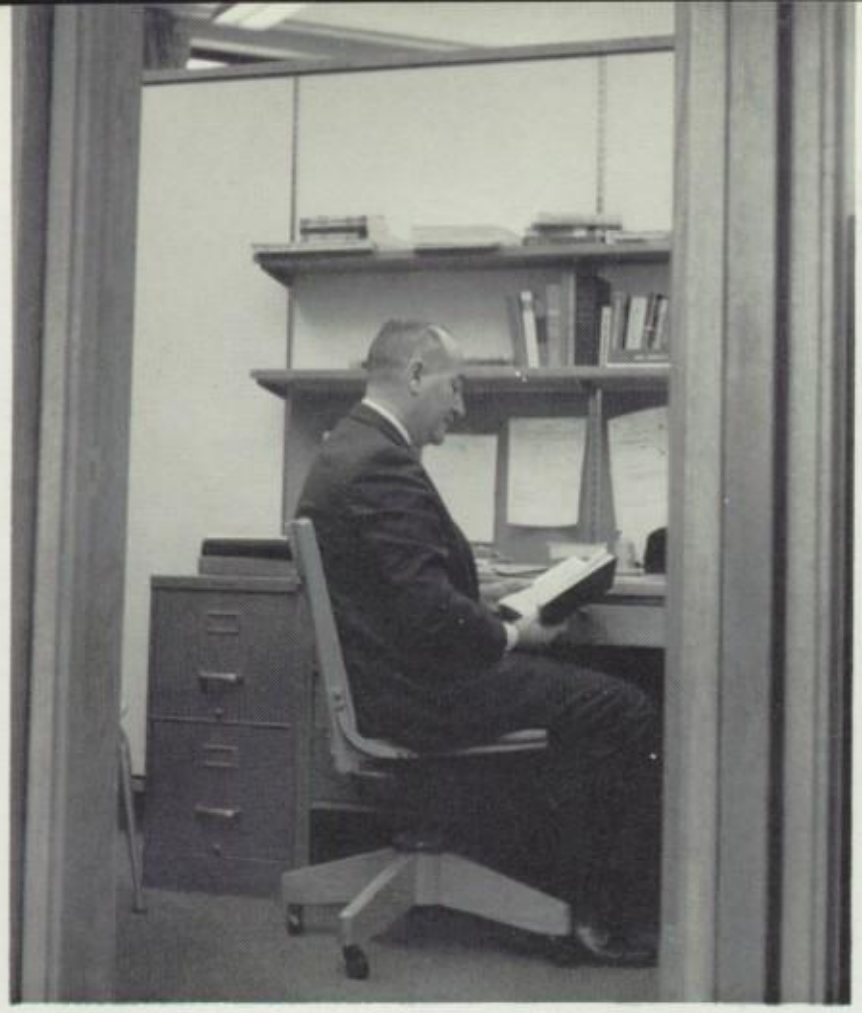


Supt.-Principal Lloyd S. Michael speaks to seniors on responsibility at the first Senior Day assembly, which also featured a rock 'n' roll concert.

Saturday makeups were eliminated this year with the opening of an all-day test center in the first floor cafeteria.

We Effected Changes

North and East Hall juniors race to see who can eat the most at their first annual pancake eating contest.



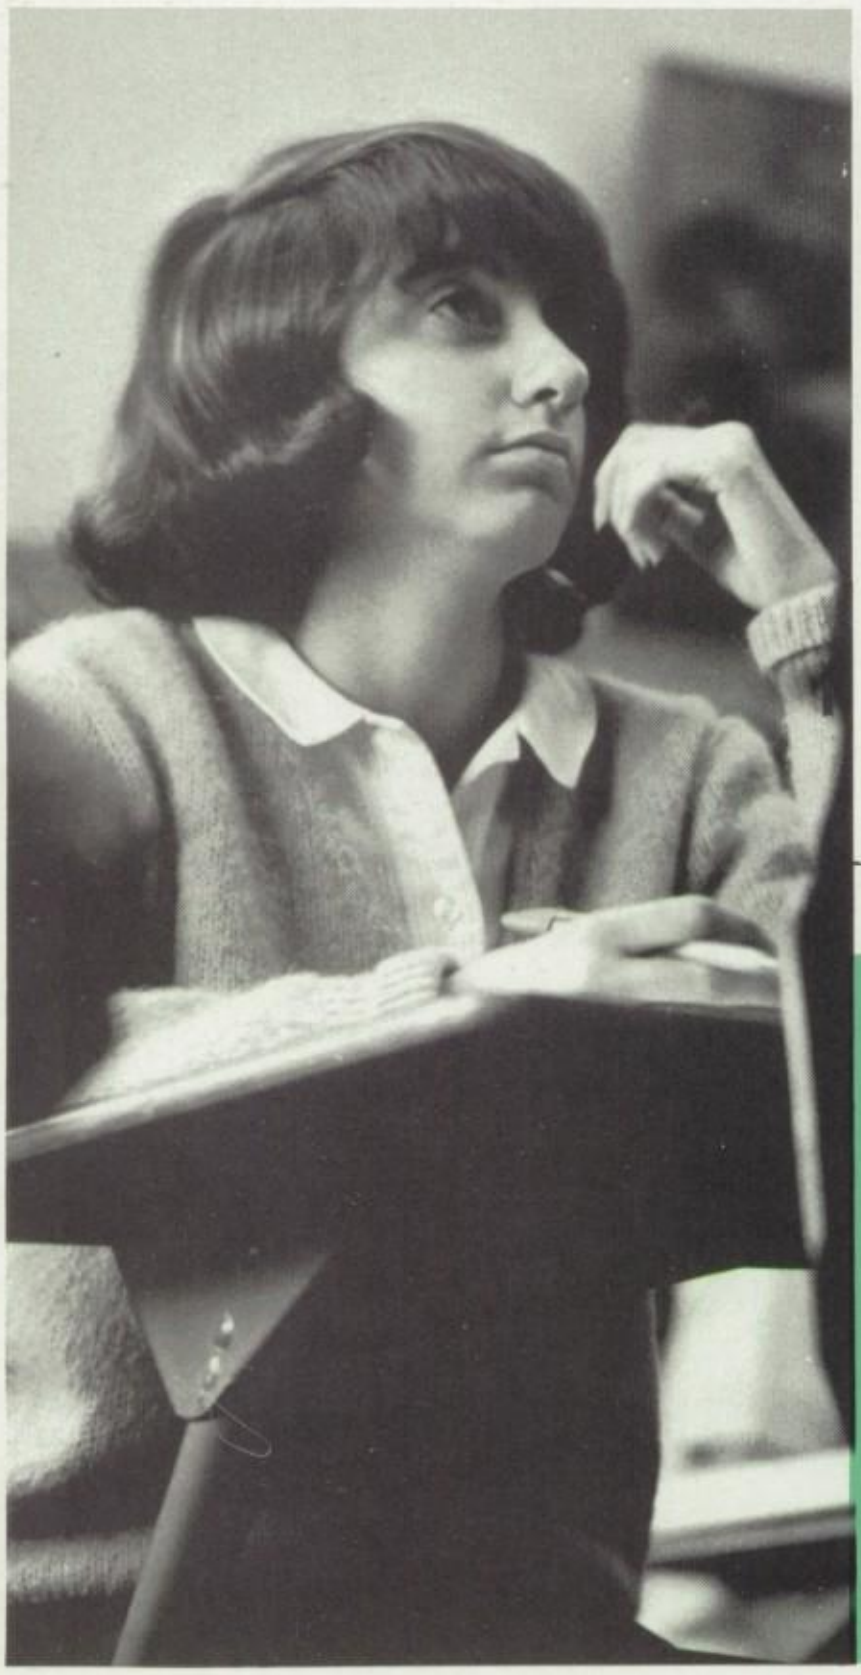
Mr. Robert Lumsden tries out one of the teachers' offices that will be part of the resource centers in the new four-school ETHS. A moden octagonal structure has been tested by English teachers second semester. About 50 of the octagons will be included in the new additions, providing private offices for 200 teachers.

Mr. Albert Turner, supervisor of language laboratories, operates the control panel for a Spanish class in the automatic dialog language lab installed at ETHS this year. Students could dial a choice of 120 programs in the lab, which will be connected to resource center carrels in the new ETHS. Facilities to tape 30 students' voices at any one time for self-correction will be provided.

As Expansion Began

A biology class watches a demonstration in the new third-floor science lab, a model for the 27 laboratory-classrooms to house the Science Department on the third floors of the projected four-school ETHS. Each lab-classroom will accommodate biology, chemistry, and physics classes. The third-floor central corridor of the present building will house seven lab-classrooms for advanced science classes to be shared by the four schools. Lecture halls will serve large groups; closed-circuit TV and inter-communication circuits will link all science classrooms.

Academics



Face Time of Challenge And Opportunity

The period in which we are living has been variously described as an age of crisis, an age of anxiety, and an age of uncertainty. It is even more a time of challenge and of opportunity.

We must ask: How is one to learn to act in accordance with his knowledge? What kind of behavior is demanded by the kind of world we live in? Are students being taught relevant ways of answering these questions?

Our school's purpose is to help each student understand the reality of the dynamic world he lives in and to gain the wisdom and courage to demand the best of himself.

Administration Plans Four-School ETHS

The combined efforts of the hall principals, homeroom directors, and the other school officials centered on preparing ETHS for its 1967 reconstruction. Plans for the coming years involved changes in school policy and programs and the reorganization of hall, department, and school activities.

Responsible for the operation of the entire high school, Dr. Lloyd S. Michael, supt.-principal, Dr. J. Floyd Hall, assistant superintendent, and Mr. Robert Bowers, assistant principal, headed the administrative staff.

Dr. William Schreiner replaced Dr. Stephen Storkel as West Hall principal, while Mr. Edward Curry, Dr. Harold Patterson, and Mr. Walter Rasmussen continued as principals of East Hall, North Hall, and South Hall.

As assistant hall principals, Mr. Glenn Eigenbrodt served in East Hall; Mr. Charles Thomas in North Hall; Mr. Robert Negronida in South Hall; and Mr. Robert Elliott in West Hall.

The East Hall homeroom directors were Mr. Glenn Eigenbrodt, 104; Mr. Leo Samuelson, 124; Mr. James Slagle, 204; and Mr. Norval Henn, 224.

In South Hall, the homeroom directors were Mr. David Cameron, 144; Mr. Walter Satterthwaite, 164; Mr. Carlyle Ehri, 224; and Mr. Robert Trevarthen, 264.

North Hall homeroom directors included Mr. Robert Alexander, 104; Mr. Murney Lazier, 124; Mr. Ronald Walden, 204; and Mr. Charles Thomas, 224.

Homeroom directors for West Hall were Mr. Ralph Potter, 144; Mr. Henry Bischoff, 164; Mr. Guenther Kolb, 244; and Mr. Robert Elliott, 264.

of Classes Form ETHS

The varied shapes and patterns of students and classes combined to form ETHS. A wide scope of courses, ranging from Salesmanship to Technical Electronics to College Level Latin, were offered at Evanston this year. Academic endeavors took many forms and could be seen in many places. Physical education students struggled through sets of pushups to strengthen their bodies, art students expressed themselves through paint, charcoal, paper, and glue, and industrial arts students practiced printing and welding. Students worked to write clearly and imaginatively in Creative Writing classes, while music students strove to better their vocal and instrumental talents. Science students labored to gain understanding of amino acids, vector diagrams, and chemical equilibrium.

Academic accomplishment was measured not only in grades but also in intellectual achievement. Independent study projects were initiated by the English, Social Studies, and Mathematics Departments. Math, English, and foreign language contests and science fairs concurred with classroom learning in improving the quality and depth of each student's understanding of academic subjects. Practical skills were taught to better prepare the student for intelligent and competent assumption of responsibility. Students grew both physically and mentally at ETHS this year; they studied the fine arts, the practical arts; the natural and applied sciences; and the art of communicating with others.

English Adapts Program to Linguistics

Mrs. Marie Claire Davis explains the effective use of metonymy to her Creative Writing class.

This year the English Department began adapting its curriculum to reflect the recent research in linguistics. Freshmen will be introduced to dictionary usage and transformational grammar, which is based on English rather than Latin; sophomores will study diction, lexicology, semantics, word derivation, and phonology; juniors will probe into dialectology and word usage; and seniors will explore the history of the English language.

An experiment in English CL carried on by the Demonstration Center for the Gifted involved alternating 85-minute seminars and library periods. Further projects to increase independent study and thought will include the initiation of small group seminars to encourage discussion and abstract thinking, with large group sessions for formal instruction. The resource centers will allow freer study conditions and more intensive research into specific topics. A nine-week reading improvement course is also planned.

A Pen and Press Tea replaced the usual publications banquet and English honors assembly, jointly recognizing English award winners and next year's editors of ETHS publications.

New projects of the department are to establish classes grouped according to student ability alone rather than the customary basis of years in school, an enlargement of the ETHS faculty, and Evanston-wide curriculum planning.

The reading center is also equipped with controlled reading machines, tachistoscopes, and language master machines, which are used to increase vocabulary as well as speed and comprehension. 1 Reading is a no-grade course offered to help students reach their potential in other classes. Basic goals besides the development of a flexible reading rate are good study methods, meaningful analysis of content, oral reading, and spelling. Vocabulary study for upper-classmen in reading classes emphasizes the morphological, etymological, and context clues to the meaning of a word; students are paced regularly at reading 500 words a minute.

Teaching Highlight Social Studies

Independent study and expanded team teaching highlighted this year's program in the Social Studies Department. Students assumed greater responsibility for their learning, following the examples of U.S. History CL and European History CL, which allow independent research through library carrels. In addition, teaching teams, providing for smaller intergroupings than recently possible, instructed ten different classes. Two English teachers worked in one level of 1 History of Civilization to increase students' reading skills, thus facilitating learning history.

Other innovations included revising the clear thinking unit and adding the study of Chinese culture to 1 History of Civilization. New emphasis was placed on people, their problems, their art, and their music. Twentieth Century Russia's popularity called for adding a second section. Videotape was a new teaching device.

Although the department already offers courses such as Problems of U.S. Foreign Policy and Twentieth Century Russia, rare among high schools, it plans to expand its curriculum even further. Hopeful summer school offerings include History of the Fast East, American Business and Economic History, The City in American Life, and Selected Problems of Culture Groups in America.

The Social Studies Department continued to offer 2 History of Civilization, covering Asian, African, and Latin American cultures, U.S. History, European History, American Problems, Senior Civics, and Economics.

Combined Studies Stresses Leadership

Leadership and especially individual expression were encouraged of all students in the Combined Studies Department. Various student committees in planning, writing, and reading helped prepare the curriculum for the year, demonstrating the democracy governing every classroom.

The treatment of English and history as one humanities course allowed students to see the natural alliance between the two subjects. Logic, critical thinking, and introductory cultural anthropology were studied while students gained experience in individual literary interpretation and creative and expository writing.

In a free atmosphere of challenge and debate, students acquired ability in effective argumentation, poise in public speaking, and self-confidence in taking a stand. They learned not only literary and social studies but the open-minded way to give and take constructive criticism as well. Independent research, emphasized equally with open discussion among classmates taught students how to work alone and with others.

Language Lab Adds 'Dial a Language,'

4 Spanish CL students Jeff Emrich and Mike Armstrong listen to Mr. Albert Turner's lecture on Spanish literature.

"Dial a language" was the newest innovation in the Foreign Language Department with the addition of the automatic dialogue language laboratory. One hundred twenty different tape lessons, each with its own dialing combination, were available for both class and individual study. The system was wired for the automatic rewinding of a tape after use and was planned for the future addition of closed circuit television in each booth.

The Institute of Far Eastern Studies at ETHS received $47,000 from the Carnegie Corporation to finance instruction in Chinese and Japanese language and culture for the next two years. With the $86,000 grant in 1964, $133,000 has been given toward Oriental studies. The courses are offered during the summer and on Saturday mornings as well as daily during the regular school term.

To add distinction to the programs in Spanish, French, German, and Latin, traditionally taught in many high schools, the department offered college level courses to capable seniors. ETHS is still a pioneer in offering Russian, Greek, Italian, Chinese, Japanese, and English for Foreign Students.

Dialogs and audio-lingual structure drills varying in difficulty are available in modern languages; the only equipment a student has to operate is a dial. Dialing a number connects the student to a remote control recorder that operates a tape; over 120 taped lessons can be programmed at a given time. The language lab center can serve as a testing room in which all students listen to the same taped examination. Films, slides and overhead projections can be viewed.

Science Department Offers Geology

Safety goggles, geology, and a teacher exchange program were new in the Science Department this year. Despite complaints from students and faculty alike, a new state law required the use of safety goggles in all chemistry classes.

Field trips highlighted Geology, a lab course offered for the first time last summer. Students gathered rocks from as far as 300 miles away, toured a lead mine, and explored naturally carved caverns. ETHS and St. Paul's College in Cheltenham, England exchanged teachers on a grant from the Board of Foreign Scholarships. Mr. John Head arrived here from England to replace Mr. Richard Hall, teaching in Cheltenham.

Laboratory work was stressed and expanded under the direction of the new department chairman, Mr. Robert Walker. General Biology Special Materials, a new experimental course on a completely lab-oriented basis, enrolled 125 students. By popular demand, the number of Physical Science classes was increased. The recently remodeled laboratory, featuring electricity, water, and compressed air outlets in each desk unit, allowed students to work individually and more efficiently.

Math Department Expands Program

Keeping up with the expanding ETHS, the Mathematics Department increased its course offerings and replaced outdated materials. Probability and Statistics and Introduction to Computers were added in summer school. A number of classes in 1 Algebra, Geometry H, and 3 Algebra-Trigonometry HAP employed new texts. Teachers began to experiment with desk calculators and planned to bring them into the classroom.

An unusual high school offering was a computer course in the form of Computer Club. Members met weekly and learned computer mechanics through films, lectures, field trips including one to Argonne National Laboratories, and Saturday workshops at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Introduction to Computers, new to the summer school curriculum two years ago, attracted a substantial number of students and provided opportunities to compose original problems to feed into the electronic brains. Students discovered how the computers roll out stacks of programs, slips, and reports.

To teach mathematics in the most modern, understandable way—the purpose of the Mathematics Department—was the job of 27 instructors. Although most of them have earned their M.A.'s, 17 enrolled in summer school and 10 attended Saturday or evening classes this year.

Another group of outstanding seniors survived the college level advanced-placement course in calculus and analytic geometry. Nearly 1,000 sophomores waded through dozens of geometric proofs and constructions. Another 1,000 freshmen fought with quadratic equations, while juniors encountered logarithims.

Mathematics for every grade, providing enjoyment for practical learning at every level, has been a constant goal of the department. A committee organized this year analyzed the present program and suggested possible improvements for the coming years.

Boys Physical Education Tests Fitness

With the purpose of giving students experience in many activities as well as an appreciation for the whole field of sports, the Boys' Physical Education Department offered a wide variety of courses. The skills and rules of group sports such as baseball, soccer, football, and basketball were presented to freshmen and sophomores, while more individual sports such as bowling, tennis, wrestling, and track and field were introduced during the junior and senior years. A course recently added for seniors alone was co-ed volleyball.

The two-year old testing program examined boys for physical fitness, endurance, and agility with such exercises as pushups, chinups, and "burpies." A one-week unit branching from Health Education given during the freshman year stressed personal health. The regular Health Education course taken during the junior year included all aspects of health, from psychosomatic illness to first aid.

The department arranged for freshman boys to be instructed by a number of ETHS coaches. The system had a three-fold value: the students received all the benefits of specialized teaching; boys gifted in one particular sport were more likely to be recognized and encouraged; and a more interesting orientation was accomplished for new students.

Girls Physical Education Stresses Skills

Girls in Miss Bonnie Bauer's senior physical education class perfect their skills.

Special classes in modern dance were offered to interested girls as a replacement for the regularly planned curriculum in the Girls Physical Education Department. These dancers, members of Esande, displayed their skills at the second annual Festival of Performing Arts in February.

Seniors were privileged this year to choose their own program. Girls Club Sports Board sponsored an awards banquet to recognize outstanding female athletes. Interscholastic competition in tennis and badminton was increased. Sophomore, junior, and senior honors classes further emphasized leadership, sportsmanship, and participation in after-school athletics. Seniors used their skills in instructing classes of lower levels.

Health Education, a required semester course for juniors, explored the systems of the human body, emotions, behavior patterns, and social relationships. The reading of up-to-date text was supplemented by booklets and film strips.

The Girls Physical Education Department carried on its varied program of swimming, golf, volleyball, speedball, track and field, gymnastics, tumbling, badminton, baseball, tennis, exercises, modern dance and archery. Students were tested not only for skills but for techniques and rules of the game through written examinations. Much stress was put on sportsmanship for achieving success in athletics.

Art Department Utilizes Artist-in-Residence

The achievements of the Art Department could best be seen along the art wing walls. Charcoal sketches, paintings, batiques, woodcuts, lithographs, rugs, and paper designs of the most talented ETHS students lined the corridors and hung in the Demonstration Center for the Gifted, attracting visitors from many schools.

As an experiment, the department added an artist-in-residence this year to work with Art Honors classes. Professional artist John Almquist personally advised outstanding students on their technique and counseled them on art career prospects.

Members of the Art Department put their talents to work with publication and production staffs. The Pilot cover, the Christmas Festival program, and The Gondoliers program were specially created by the department. Chairman Frank Tresise designed the colorful period wardrobe of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, with flamboyant skirts, breeches and knickers, three-cornered hats, and lace-lined sleeves.

With over 800 students enrolled in a dozen art courses, the department faced a critical space shortage, which the building program will remedy.

Speech Arts Varies Activities Program

To give more students experience in preparing and performing in productions before an audience, the Speech Arts Department expanded its program of activities. The Festival of Performing Arts, Studio Theatre plays, the four hall productions, The Lark, and the spring play were all produced in association with the department.

Speech Arts students broadened their interests this year. Guitar playing, dancing, singing, monologues, and a comedy routine were included in the "Freshman Showcase." The Readers' Theatre production of the play "Dandelion Wine" also experimented with various art forms. Advanced Dramatic Arts students tackled Broadway hits like Our Town, Barefoot in the Park, The Fantasticks, Luv, and Porgy and Bess.

The department offered courses in other facets of oral communication. Debate taught the art of argumentation and refutation while Effective Speaking concentrated on informal deliveries to persuade, inform, inspire, or entertain. Behind-the-scenes activities such as sound, lighting, scene design, and set construction, busied stagecraft students. Television Production class members, using the ETHS television studio as their laboratory, gained experience as directors, graphic artists, writers, announcers, actors, and cameramen.

History of Music Course Introduced

A widening of musical scope and expansion in curriculum marked 1965-66 for the Music Department. In addition to the regularly offered instrumental, vocal, and theory classes, a course in humanities, Great Art: Music, examined music history in relation to general history.

Departing from the traditional Christmas Festival program, Menotti's operetta Amahl and the Night Visitors was presented. The production of the operetta Wicked Sam and the Devil, written and directed by Mr. Jon Polifrone from Indiana State Univ. offered students a chance to study the development of the libretto and score. Gilbert and Sullivan's The Gondoliers, the spring musical, was performed in conjunction with the Speech Arts Department.

An integral part of student musical training was the ensemble program, in which every band and orchestra member participated. The various ensembles performed at Musicians Club programs and the annual ensemble workshop.

Industrial Arts Looks Toward Future

To serve the students of today while planning for the future was the aim of the Industrial Arts Department. Offering courses from basic Technical Arts to 3 Technical Electronics, the department reached many students.

Various courses in the fields of graphic arts, woodworking, auto mechanics, electricity, mechanical drawing, and metal-working were designed for college-bound students interested in engineering and pre-technical students. Also for upper classmen planning undergraduate engineering programs, Engineering Survey examined major technological areas.

In Diversified Occupations, a work-study course, students not only attended classes but actually worked on the job. A course in Service Station Management was added for students planning to seek employment immediately after graduation.

Home Economics Focuses on Management

Home economics students like Linda Klinger learn the fundamentals of preparing meals.

Management has grown in importance in society, and the Home Economics Department has followed the trend. Girls learned not only clothes construction and food preparation but also family living, upkeep of the home, and budgeting of time and money.

Advanced Foods dealt with food costs and nutrition. The physical and psychological formation of children was explored in Child Development-Homemaking with laboratory sessions in the nursery.

Progressing from simple shifts to fitted dresses with linings, students in Advanced Clothing backed up their sewing skills with knowledge of textiles and fashion. Housing and interior decorating were emphasized in 2 Home Survey, offered in cooperation with the Art Department. Girls in 3 Home Survey used films, texts, and periodicals to study family life.

Business Education Adds Computer Study

The Business Education Department prepared students planning to follow business careers by offering such courses as Typing, College Notehand, Shorthand, Accounting, Business Law, Data Processing, Record Keeping, and Office Procedures.

The department introduced Computer Fundamentals, a new course which supplemented the Data Processing course in the second semester. The course offered students the opportunity to learn about modern computer technology through the use of textbooks, technical manuals, and the high school computer.

Also instituted was Clerical Practice, a general course in office work, which will be offered in this year's summer school and in the 1966-1967 school year.

Evanston upperclassmen gained experience in their chosen future professions through the Distributive Education and the Diversified Occupations program.

DE, DO Provide Vocational Experience

Mark Davies gains practical working experience as a part-time salesman in the Distributive Education program.

Distributive Education and Diversified Occupations provided opportunity and experience for students seeking jobs immediately after graduation. Both programs included classroom and on-the-job instruction in the occupation of the student's choice.

Ranging from mechanics to dental assistance, DO offered training in trade and industrial occupation to juniors and seniors. Students learned the principles and theories of their job in addition to employer-employee relations, personality assets, and the budgeting of income.

A work and study course in marketing and distribution, DE focused on developing vocational understanding, civic consciousness, social intelligence, and leadership. Presenting an occupational orientation to the business world, DE offered such career positions as company buyer, manager, and cashier. Participants belonged to DECA, through which they met other students in similar programs.

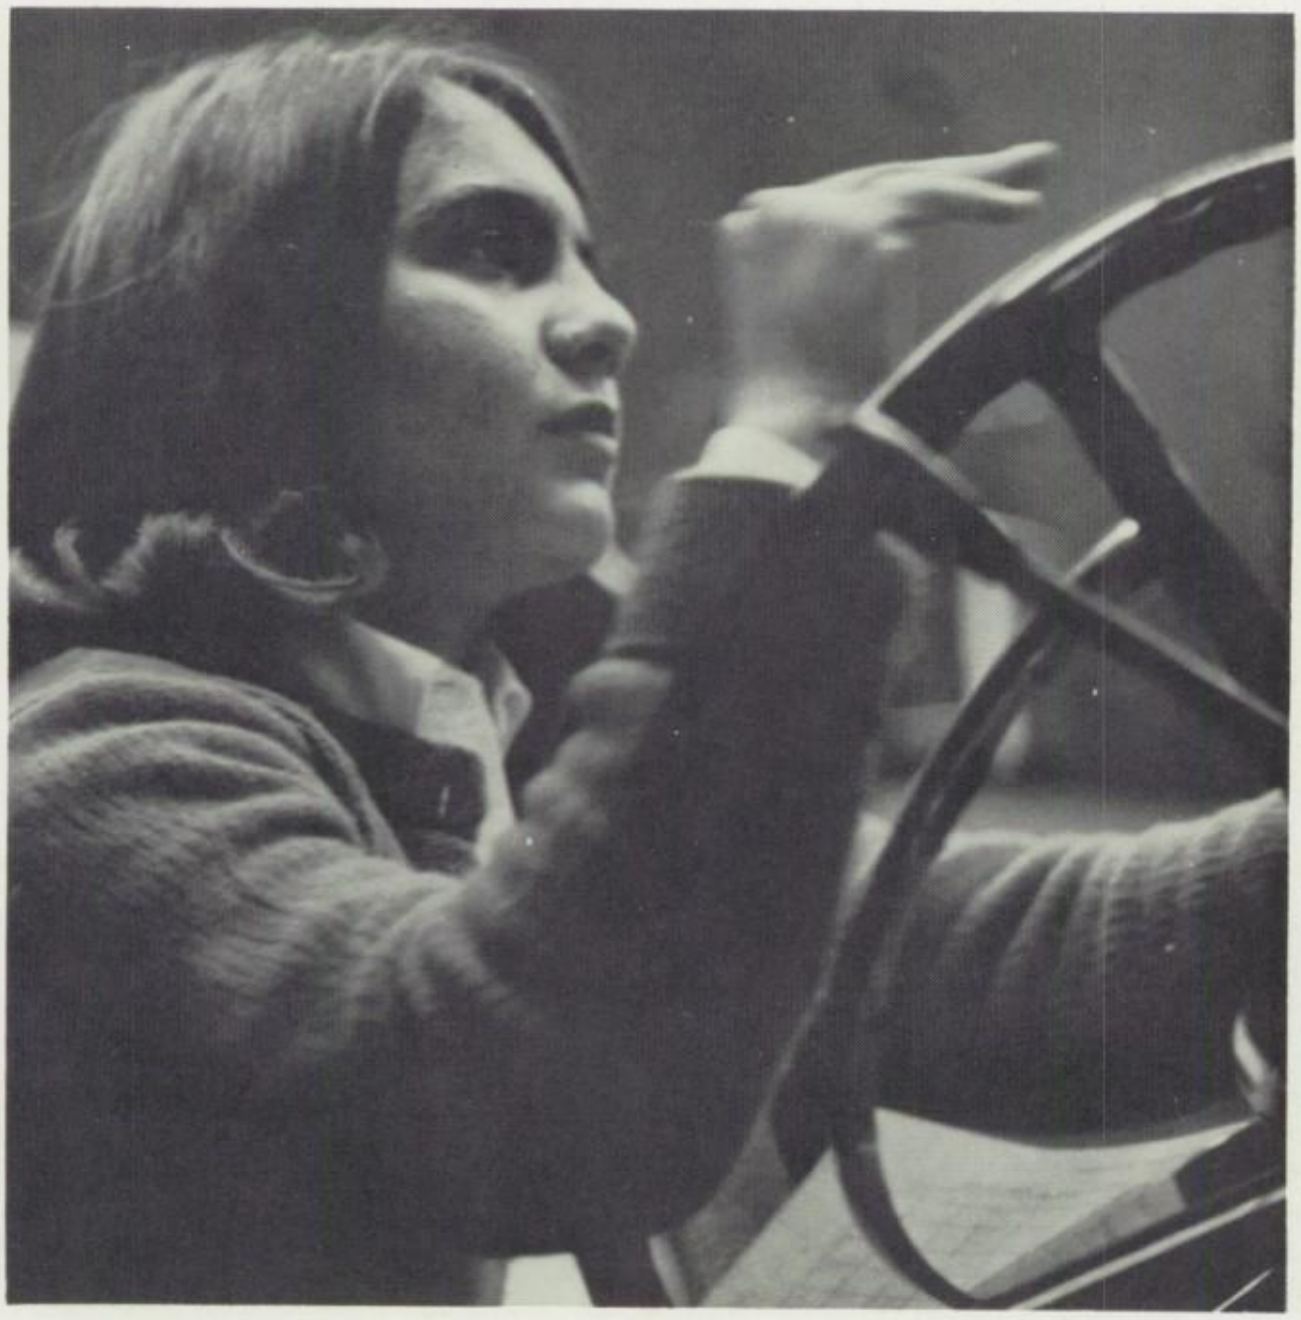
Driver Education Uses Films, Slides

Emphasizing human psychology in driving, the Driver Education Department taught students self-control behind the wheel. A nine-week classroom phase required of sophomores used textbooks, videotape recordings, films, and slides to cover the Illinois traffic code and accident precautions.

Driver Training, an elective laboratory course, placed students first at the wheel of Drivo-trainers, reacting to flashing films of traffic situations, and then in specially equipped cars. On the driving range, manipulation of the vehicle was stressed in turning, parking, and stopping smoothly. Progressing to the road, students learned the strategies of defensive driving.

Team teaching proved successful for the second year in the department. Wide screen Cinemascope education films were added to the program to increase the realism of driving situations and to further stimulate student interest.

Students in a Driver Training class receive directions from Mr. Gary McAvoy on techniques in parallel parking.



Sheila Collins gains experience by driving to films in Mr. Donald Blaze's Driver Education class.

Demonstration Center Stresses Fine Arts

The Drake University trio demonstrates how a musical chamber group is coordinated to Fran Berge and Bill Rehfield.

In its third year at Evanston, the Demonstration Center for the Gifted articulated the ETHS program for above-average students in the fine arts. While visitors enjoyed the products of talented students, Illinois educators consulted on improving the quality of instruction for students in their own schools.

A major part of the center's program this year brought an artist-in-residence to Art Honors classes. Professional artist John Almquist advised individual students on techniques and art career outlooks.

In February the center sponsored workshops on dance, pantomime, the string ensemble, and the stage band in conjunction with the Performing Arts Festival.

Evanston's fine arts program for gifted students included courses in music, speech arts, dance, and art. Along with the other 24 Demonstration Centers throughout Illinois, the ETHS center was financially supported by a state grant.

Library Prepares for Expanded ETHS

In accordance with the growth of ETHS, the library has been preparing to expand into one central library and four resource centers.

Each will have an IBM machine and new study carrels in which a student may use audio tapes and eight-millimeter film loops, typewrite, and orally practice a foreign language. To help the staff and students adapt to the new arrangement, a revised card catalogue will code for the location of books.

IBM greatly simplified the process of adding new books to the library by eliminating typed book orders and allowing order cards to serve also as shelf list cards. The system also made book lists available to teachers. A three-millimeter copier for making transparencies for overhead projectors, and the opportunity to preview films and borrow audio-visual equipment for an entire year further aided teachers.

Counselors Guide Student Planning

North Hall junior counselor Mr. Floyd Cummings brings changes in the new Curriculum Guide to the attention of Jonathan Moses.

From selecting a freshman program to choosing a college or life's work, students made decisions with the professional advice of the members of the Guidance Department. Counselors looked upon students as individuals and personal friends, sympathizing with them in their failures and smiling with them in their successes.

The department was responsible for administering standardized tests for student placement purposes, running surveys on the success of counseling and academic programs, furnishing college and vocational information, and guiding students through four demanding high school years. Counselors' office doors were always open to students with complaints or problems.

Saintly patience, shrewd judgment, and careful understanding were required of counselors. They had to deal with the potentially intelligent teen lacking ambition; the indecisive junior torn between European History and Physics for next year; the shocked senior just realizing the nearness of college; the frantic freshman bewildered by high school level work; the self-condemning student needing inner confidence.

Helping a foreign student lose his accent, washing an athlete's cut leg, and teaching a deaf student to lip-read were included among the diverse services of the Special Services Departments. Health Service handled simple injuries and ills of the students and kept medical records of each individual.

The newest division of the department enrolled five blind and three partially seeing ETHS students, who, with the aid of Braille textbooks and special instruction, could attend regular high school classes. Deaf students also learned how to communicate and fit in with the rest of the student body.

To allow students confined to hospitals and home beds to keep up with their studies, the department sent out visiting teachers as special tutors.

Other special education instructors worked with the educable mentally handicapped. Another section of the department helped students conquer speech difficulties from foreign accents to lisping to stuttering, with the aid of tape recorders and television.

Community Student Union Discussed

by Central Council

The plan for a community student union merited major discussion in Central Council this year. A committee of eight students promoted the idea of a center for dancing and socializing.

The self-education program, in its third year, was another important CC project. ETHS remained the only American high school with such a program, in which students directly questioned prominent speakers.

President Joel Marks guided the student governing body to fulfill its primary purposes, including arousing school spirit and distributing money to school activities and organizations. By copying structure and operation from the United States government, CC also tried to give students a feeling of responsibility as citizens of a democracy.

Finally, CC functioned as a uniting body. All four Hall Councils, Quadrangle, Girls Club, CC Committees, and the many specialized interest clubs consolidated their powers under the ETHS student government. Through these smaller organizations, CC represented and affected every ETHS student.

Planning the year's goals for Central Council are its four officers: Stuart Bentkover, vice-president, Linda Martin, secretary, Joel Marks, president, and Mike Babbitt, treasurer.

CC Committees Aid Building Program

Becky Whitehouse works with Colleen Cunningham on the fundamentals of Spanish grammar in a session sponsored by the CC Tutoring Committee.

Coordinated by Stuart Bentkover, Central Council vice-president, the Central Council Committees solved problems and suggested improvements for ETHS. The Building Committee informed freshmen and sophomores of the building program and served as an artery of communication between the student body and building directors.

Crucial parking difficulties were solved by two programs of the Safety Committee, providing for the building of a new lot and the assigning of specific spaces to faculty and students. The Lost and Found Committee started to notify students of their lost items.

The Citizenship Committee initiated a toy drive and a leadership training program for new student officers. To arouse school spirit, Loyalty Committee organized Senior Girls Pep Club, the cheer section at sports events, and the selling of ETHS scarves and pin-its.

The two-year-old Student Tutoring Committee confronted many applications to receive tutoring and too few to work as tutors. But academic progress was shown in students who applied for and got aid. With the student lounge reduced in size by the new location of the student activities office, the student lounge committee had to ban juniors from the lounge.

The Publicity Committee painted ETHS news on posters and downtown windows. Freshmen were acquainted with the school through the Orientations Committee last September. The Hi-Lights Record Committee preserved the year's memorable moments in an album. Directing voting procedures and tabulating results were the primary tasks of the Election Committee.

East Sponsors Play, Dance, Carnival

Pioneering a new kind of production, East Hall presented the first hall play. "The Long Christmas Dinner," by Thornton Wilder, and "The Fables" and "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" from A Thurber Carnival, by James Thurber, were combined with musical entertainment. Mrs. Doris Rudy, speech arts teacher, directed the all-East Hall casts.

The Wild West awakened at "Dodge City," the Girls Club Carnival, sponsored by East Hall Girls Club. Money went toward scholarships. The organization also hosted an inter-school dinner during the competitive basketball season.

The Dodge Boys Stagecoach Line, with East Hall Quadrangle at the reins, rode through Girls Club's "Dodge City." With North Hall, South Hall, and West Hall Quadrangles, East Hall Quadrangle also helped sponsor "La Fiesta Brava," the 1965 Homecoming dance.

North Emphasizes Service Projects

Winning honors and prizes preoccupied North Hall this year. Accepting East Hall juniors' challenge to a pancake eating contest, North Hall juniors took a narrow victory. The sophomore homeroom was awarded a plaque for contributing the most money to the United Fund Drive. Intramural partcipation reached a new high for the hall. North Hall also gave Evanston's poor a Thanksgiving meal through the canned foods drive, the annual service project.

North Hall Quadrangle paraded the winning Homecoming float, "The Lord of the Flies," and helped produce "La Fiesta Brava." Pioneering the "dunk 'em" booth at Girls Club Carnival and presenting homeroom period movies in cooperation with Girls Club also busied Quadrangle.

The Daddy-Daughter-Dinner-Dance and the caring for an elderly woman were two diverse projects of North Hall Girls Club. The organization sponsored pin-it sales and the doghouse refreshment center at football games, both to raise scholarship funds.

South Initiates Honor Study Hall

South and West Hall Girls Club members mingle at a Halloween party.

The key to South Hall this year, in preparation for the coming division of the school, was responsibility. South Hall students did clerical work in the hall office, the library, health service, and the main office.

Independent of the other halls, South Hall initiated an honor study hall for freshmen and sophomores in the second floor cafeteria. The hall also carried out a program of short-term tutoring, which arranged for a student to be helped by a volunteer in his study hall for a few days. This year seniors attended their own assemblies for entertainment and information.

Girls Club and Quadrangle continued programs of service and social projects. Quadrangle members helped to sponsor this year's Homecoming Dance, "La Fiesta Brava," served as hall guards, and yelled in the cheer section. The entire hall joined in the support of Quadrangle's Vietnamese child for the second year.

Girls Club activities for the year included sponsoring the Turnabout dance, "Catch Me If You Can," and selling hotdogs at football games.

South Hall participated actively in this year's Girls Club Carnival, "Dodge City," with a barrel ride entitled "Hang On Sloopy."

Homeroom Projects

West Hall Council's candy sale smashed all expectations this year, netting a one-third profit out of the $1,500 earned. The purpose of the project was raising money for the homeroom period entertainment and hall service projects.

Nguyen Thi Bong, a 15-year-old Vietnamese girl, was adopted by West Hall juniors under the Foster Parent Plan. By paying $15 a month, West-144 bought her clothes and supplies and financed her education. Selling box lunches, baked goods, pencils, and a homeroom newspaper earned money for the undertaking.

Closely competing with South Hall for points, West Hall led the intramural race several times this year. The largest number of semifinalists in the National Merit Scholarship Foundation program hailed from West Hall.

At Homecoming, West Hall Quadrangle contributed a float and publicity for "La Fiesta Brava." The boys also sponsored a profitable splash painting booth at "Dodge City," the Girls Club Carnival. Producing the Quadrangle-Girls Club Dance busied both West Hall organizations in February.

Santa's Workshop highlighted the service projects of West Hall Girls Club. Members decorated in a romantic London mood for the turnabout. They also added a romantic touch to "Dodge City" with the Marilyn Maverick Marriage booth. Sponsoring Bow Day and the pom-pom sales at home games occupied the girls, along with working in the doghouse refreshment stand and serving as faculty student aids. West Hall Girls Club's Homecoming float, "Who Are You?" took third place.

Language Clubs Stress Education

Reviewing Russian vocabulary, Gwen Gassen and Sue Kopstein ready themselves for the Russian Study Club mixer at Brookfield High.

Through field trips, movies, lectures, and parties, the foreign language clubs introduced students to the culture and cuisine of countries from Spain to Siberia. The organizations presented their offerings especially for those students who wished to learn more than the language of a people.

Off-campus parties and field trips helped the student to become familiar with his second tongue and introduced him to specific cultural activities. Students learned folk songs and dances in Russian Club, heard speakers like Mr. Roland Eves, and enjoyed the food of an alien culture during German Club's excursion to a German restaurant for "A Night on The Town."

Along with the presentations of professional lecturers were discussion groups led by foreign students at the high school level. During these sessions, not only were ETHS club members able to hear a native's viewpoint on art and politics, but they could converse with the student in his own language.

This year the language clubs returned to their tradition of having separate banquets. An authentic Roman style feast, a lively Gallic cuisine, a spicy Mexican supper were representative of the dinners at which students dined informally with their teachers and were entertained by skits in their chosen language.

Students Pursue Diversified Fields,

Combined Studies Council officers David Cohen, Sheri Krass, and Steve Barron make plans for the annual Combined Studies family night.

Scandinavia, China, Japan, South America, Italy, Spain, Germany, Poland, and England were all represented in Cosmopolitan Club. Its foreign-born members exhibited colorful travel posters of their homelands for the benefit of American ETHS students. In an informal social atmosphere, members learned about the cultures of many foreign lands through films, lectures, and especially conversation.

Debate, an extracurricular branch of the Speech Arts Department, argued and refuted the 1965-66 topic. Time spent on researching and rehearsing paid off for many debators in new self-confidence and public speaking experience. Child development, high school instruction, and teachers' education were discussed by members of the Future Teachers' Club. In its first authorized year, the organization encouraged interested students to pursue teaching fields.

The Inter-Group Relations Forum, headed by chairman Collette Hill and sponsor Mr. Charles Martin, examined human relations concerning high school students. IGRF presented a series of TV sequences on American Negro history, conducted an inter-group relations conference in conjunction with other Evanston high schools, and, through the Community Relations Board, gave junior high and grade school students a more comprehensive view of ETHS life.

The freshman party, theater parties, the Combined Studies spring picnic, leaders' seminar, the senior dinner, and Combined Studies family night were included in this year's activities of the Combined Studies Council, directed by David Cohen and sponsored by Mr. Dean Hanebuth.

Press Bureau, Career Conference Serve School

Mrs. Barbara Pannwitt explains an Evanston Review assignment to Press Bureau director Marlene Morvaji.

Mrs. Barbara Pannwitt, sponsor, and Marlene Morvaji, director, guided Press Bureau reporters to fulfill the publication's two-fold purpose: to publicize school activities and to provide experiences in journalism. Through the Evanston Review and other local newspapers, 3 English HJ students provided the community with information about the faculty, student achievements, dramatic productions, and sports. The bureau photographed with its own camera to catch spontaneous shots of school events.

Field trips, films, and speakers highlighted the monthly career programs offered by Career Conference, in coordination with the Guidance Department. Professional fields featured this year included foreign service, business, and the fine arts. Prospective educators toured Oakton School to gain a better understanding of the benefits and demands of the teaching profession. After becoming acquainted with occupational possibilities, students could more confidently make college and career plans.

Under the direction of Neil Rosenthal, president, and Mrs. Marie Claire Davis, sponsor, Writers Club combined social activities with sessions for student literary critics. New this year was poetry reading to bongo drums in an informal cafe atmosphere and the production of a play by Ron Fridell of Northwestern.

Six times during the year, Word Mosaics published selections of student writing. A few lectures on various aspects of writing, an anthology of student works, and informal parties comprised the remainder of the club's program.

Contributing extra-curricular time to work on Photo Service, students in Mr. John Regan's photography classes provided pictures for the Evanstonian, The Pilot, and Word Mosaics this year. Photographs were also selected for monthly displays and entered in the Kodak exhibit in December. The introduction of hall plays to the usual theater productions increased the service and widened the scope of Photo Service.

While developing camera skills and learning about film processing, Photo Service members publicized and promoted ETHS activities.

To Meet Deadlines

The tensions of meeting three dreaded deadlines paid off to the yearbook staff in The 1966 Key, edited by Debbie deSchweinitz. Layout, copy, and picture selection were done with the theme, "Growth and Development," in mind. Color sparked the division pages, and a helicopter made possible the front end sheet. Linotype printing added a more professional air.

The year spent putting together the 232-page Key began last spring when future editors attended weekly classes in producing a yearbook. After several summer meetings, the staff occupied room 173 in September, and the room resounded with frantic typing and scurrying feet.

In its thirty-sixth year, the ETHS newspaper, The Evanstonian, emphasized depth reporting under the direction of Editor-in-chief Seth Masia. This type of coverage included more details and background information. The staff penetrated subjects more deeply to attain their desired goal in every Thursday edition.

After selecting newsworthy topics, beat editors assigned 3 English HJ students to dig up the facts and combine them into a story. Time was a constant worry with a new deadline confronting the staff every week. But workers relaxed at J-parties during the year.

Service Clubs Aid School, Community

Chances to gain new knowledge while aiding others were available to members of the various service organizations. The Budget Ticket Staff and Library Club served practically every ETHS student, while the Volunteer Bureau worked for the community outside school.

Chris Delort, Karen Nelson, and Jackie Hill work on the Library Club's Girls Club Carnival booth.

Bud, the Budget Ticket troll, promoted this year's sales, totaling $25,000 from 87.1 per cent of the entire school. East Hall, leading with 87 per cent participation, was followed by West Hall, 1.8 per cent behind. East-204 with 96.4 per cent sales captured first place among homerooms. West-264, North-124, and South-164 followed. While providing money to finance student activities and publications, Budget ticket owners entitled themselves to The Evanstonian, The Key, The Pilot, four football games, nine basketball games, seven gymnastic meets, seven swimming meets, and seven wrestling meets.

Unique in meeting every day, the Library Club included 35 members who checked out books and magazines, organized book shelves, and helped with the presentation of new books. These members also aided students having difficulty with the numbering system or pondering over which book to select. IBM greatly facilitated checking out material.

Volunteer Bureau branched out from ETHS while favorably affecting the school's reputation. Members spent weekends performing nursing duties at Evanston Hospital, St. Francis Hospital, and Community Hospital; caring for the aged at the Presbyterian Home; and amusing children at the Child Care Center. Elementary school children were tutored by the bureau.

Small Clubs Encompass Wide Interests

Rev. William Cook listens to a question from the audience at his discussion of student protest movements at an International Round Table meeting.

To satisfy the interests of serious-minded students, Evanston furnished small clubs dealing with current events, sociology, mathematics, mechanics, and the universe.

Members of the International Round Table heard and questioned prominent speakers on pressing problems. Nigerian Nande Abimbola led discussion on his native country and its role in Africa, and Rev. William Cook, national field director of the Council on Religious and International Affairs gave members insight into student alienation.

In its seminar on race relations and civil rights, IRT saw the film, "Marked for Failure" and heard the psychological viewpoint of the problem from Dr. James Morton and the sociological from Dr. Raymond Mack. On a similar discussion basis, Afro-Asian Club concentrated on the current problems of Africa and Asia.

Through lectures and field trips, Math-Science Club, among its varied activities, watched the production and operation of a laser and saw a Klein bottle—one without insides—take form at Northwestern University. Astronomy Club shared its knowledge with non-members by producing a movie on America's Apollo space program to the moon and by writing a magazine of recent astronomical discoveries. A day at Yerkes Observatory highlighted the club's activities.

General Finance Corporation computers were besieged each weekend by Computer Club members, who both programmed and operated the machines. Other field trips were made to Argonne National Laboratory, State Bank and Trust, and Illinois Institute of Technology. In Radio Club, other electronically oriented students maintained their own radio station, W9ESA, and worked on individual electronic projects. Senior members trained newcomers wanting amateur radio licenses.

in School, Community

Sponsored by the Music Department, the honor vocal groups Girls Choir and Mastersingers provided singing opportunities for students with an unusual enthusiasm and aptitude for music. Directed by Mr. Richard Rosewall, the Mastersingers rehearsed twice a week to develop proficiency in group singing. This year they participated in the Christmas festival; a special Christmas program for the ETHS Faculty Wives Club; the Spring Festival; and Sing, Men, Sing, featuring Gershwin songs.

With the intent of building an appreciation for fine music of all types, Girls Choir sang secular and sacred music from Renaissance to contemporary times. Under the direction of Miss Helen Keith, junior and senior girls tried to create a balance and a blend of tones in their singing. Highlighting their year was a performance for the Evanston Women's Club.

This season the 56 members of the ETHS Marching Band played for the four home football games, the ETHS Homecoming, and the Northwestern Homecoming. Under the direction of Mr. Robert Werner and Mr. Robert Fought, a fitting combination of music, instruments, and formations was strived for in each program. Rehearsing daily, the Marching Band presented a new program of six to eight pieces every appearance.

A new emphasis was placed this year on balancing precision marching with good music. In this way, not only did the students gain a strong sense of rhythm but a musical experience as well.

Jazz Adds Novelty to Performances

Members of the Dance Band rehearse at an after-school session.

Under the direction of Mr. Richard Thomas, the ETHS Dance Band, composed of members from the various instrumental classes, added a jazz element to music programs. Band musicians improved their skills while gaining a well rounded knowledge of their art. An annual concert climaxed their work.

In Mrs. Betty Jacobson's Madrigal group, freshman and sophomore girls gained further chorus experience. Selections performed this year ranged from romantic to contemporary works, including some of Mrs. Jacobson's own compositions, prepared for the Christmas and the Spring Music Festivals. The girls were selected on the basis not only of voice quality and musicianship but also by their potentiality as group singers.

ETHS choir members, directed by Mr. Richard Rosewall, used their imaginations and experience in interpreting varied musical compositions. Besides singing annually at music festivals and caroling through the halls before Christmas, members, clad in colorful peasant dress, performed in Menotti's operetta Amahl and the Night Visitors. A superior voice quality, an appreciation of musical expression, and a willingness to practice long hours were prerequisites of each ETHS choir member.

Yamo '65 Satirizes

A slinky, golden-wrapped blonde slithered out of a street locker in Yamo '65, entitled "36-24-36: The Student Body" or "The Winning Combination." Breaking away from the traditional all-comedy program, the writers included a serious sketch with a sociological message called "Man and Machines."

In the comic vein but with a new twist were "Holocaust," a parody on television pop dance shows, and "Classroom Roulette," slides of classroom activities incongruously connected for a humorous effect. Student-composed music, kilt-clad Scottish dancers, spirituals, and minstrels were also new to Yamo.

But tradition was not forgotten. Gymnastics, dance acts, combos and ensembles, and blackouts, blackouts, blackouts produced the yearly gasps, applause, laughs, and groans. Entertainers included the ETHS Percussion Ensemble, The Sidewinders, The Tempos, the ETHS Trombone Choir, The Others, and ETHS gymnasts.

Satire, as always, was the main source of humor, and Yamo '65 attacked a variety of people and institutions. School policies on dress, the ETHS library, hall principals, and classes were local victims. Astronomy Club, German Club, and Chess Club also got into the act. Parodies on bug-killer, hair creme, and the jolly green giant commercials poked fun at the world of television. Finally, a blackout was done on the blackout itself.

Band members, dancers, and the chorus work vigorously as the opening night of Yamo approaches.

Spanish Air Pervades Homecoming Dance

Tradition guided 1965 Homecoming activities Oct. 22-23 through Friday's pep rally and Saturday's football game and dance.

Arrayed in red, white, and blue uniforms, the marching Cadet Band kicked off the pep rally at Memorial Field, followed by a flashy parade of orange, blue, and white floats. Hundreds of students ignored the cold, cloudy weather to come and choose their favorite floats and Homecoming Queen candidate. North Hall Quadrangle's smoke-spouting float captured first place, South-144's creation second, and West Hall Girls Club's entry third.

After Coach Murney Lazier introduced the varsity football team, Josh Hoffman, Senior Class president, proclaimed the 1965 Homecoming queen, Marsha Bayly, who was wearing the traditional corsage and skirt-and-sweater outfit. Her first honor was to receive the autographed football from Mike Lazier and Mike Phillips, varsity football co-captains. Afterwards, cheerleaders helped Mr. William Bunn draw spirited yells from the crowd.

With bleachers jammed and enthusiasm high, the Wildkits blanked the Morton East Mustangs 39-0 Saturday afternoon. The background of balloons, confetti, and waving pompoms changed to a romantic Spanish atmosphere at "La Fiesta Brava," the Homecoming dance. That evening Queen Marsha was formally crowned and her court recognized. Bands in both social hall and the student lounge provided music for dancing.

Steve Rippeteau and Sandy Kristal pause from dancing to have refreshments.

Carnival Booths Recreate Wild West

Connie South and Kim Sizemore dance a 'Hole in the Wall' at Esande's booth at the Girls' Club Carnival.

The Wild West lived again in the 1965 Girls Club Carnival, "Dodge City." The old general store and the county jail were depicted via murals, and food and soft drinks were available at a nearby saloon. Tickets for the 20 colorful exhibits were sold in a covered wagon.

In first place was the CC stock and pillory booth, holding captive many unsuspecting victims. The Esande Go-Go Girls, dancing to a modern beat, followed in second place. For the marriage-minded, West Hall Girls Club provided the ceremony, certificate, bridesmaids, ring, and veil in their Marilyn Maverick marriage booth.

Two novel amusements were the South Hall barrel ride, "Hang On Sloopy," and the East Hall Quadrangle's Wells Fargo Wagon ride, run by Quadrangle Dodge Boys.

Traditional booths included a balloon shaving display by Library Club and the cheerleaders' exhibit of baby pictures of ETHS football players. Students could send 10-word telegrams through the Combined Studies booth.

Those students agile in mind and body could exhibit their skill at Math-Science Club's "Calculated Possibility" booth and Cosmopolitan Club's ring toss. Cowed by French-German-Spanish Clubs' haunted gold mine, student could regain their self-confidence by hitting the target in the Russian Study Club's dart-throwing booth.

The success of Girls Club's attempts to make the fieldhouse into a Western frontier city was helped by those students who checked in their "guns" at the fort stockade, which served as the entrance to Dodge City.

Students practice their squirt gun skills at Cosmopolitan Club's shooting gallery.

'Lark' Utilizes Flashbacks, Raked Set

Joan convinces the Dauphin, played by Tim Landfield that he has the ability to gain the throne that is rightfully his.

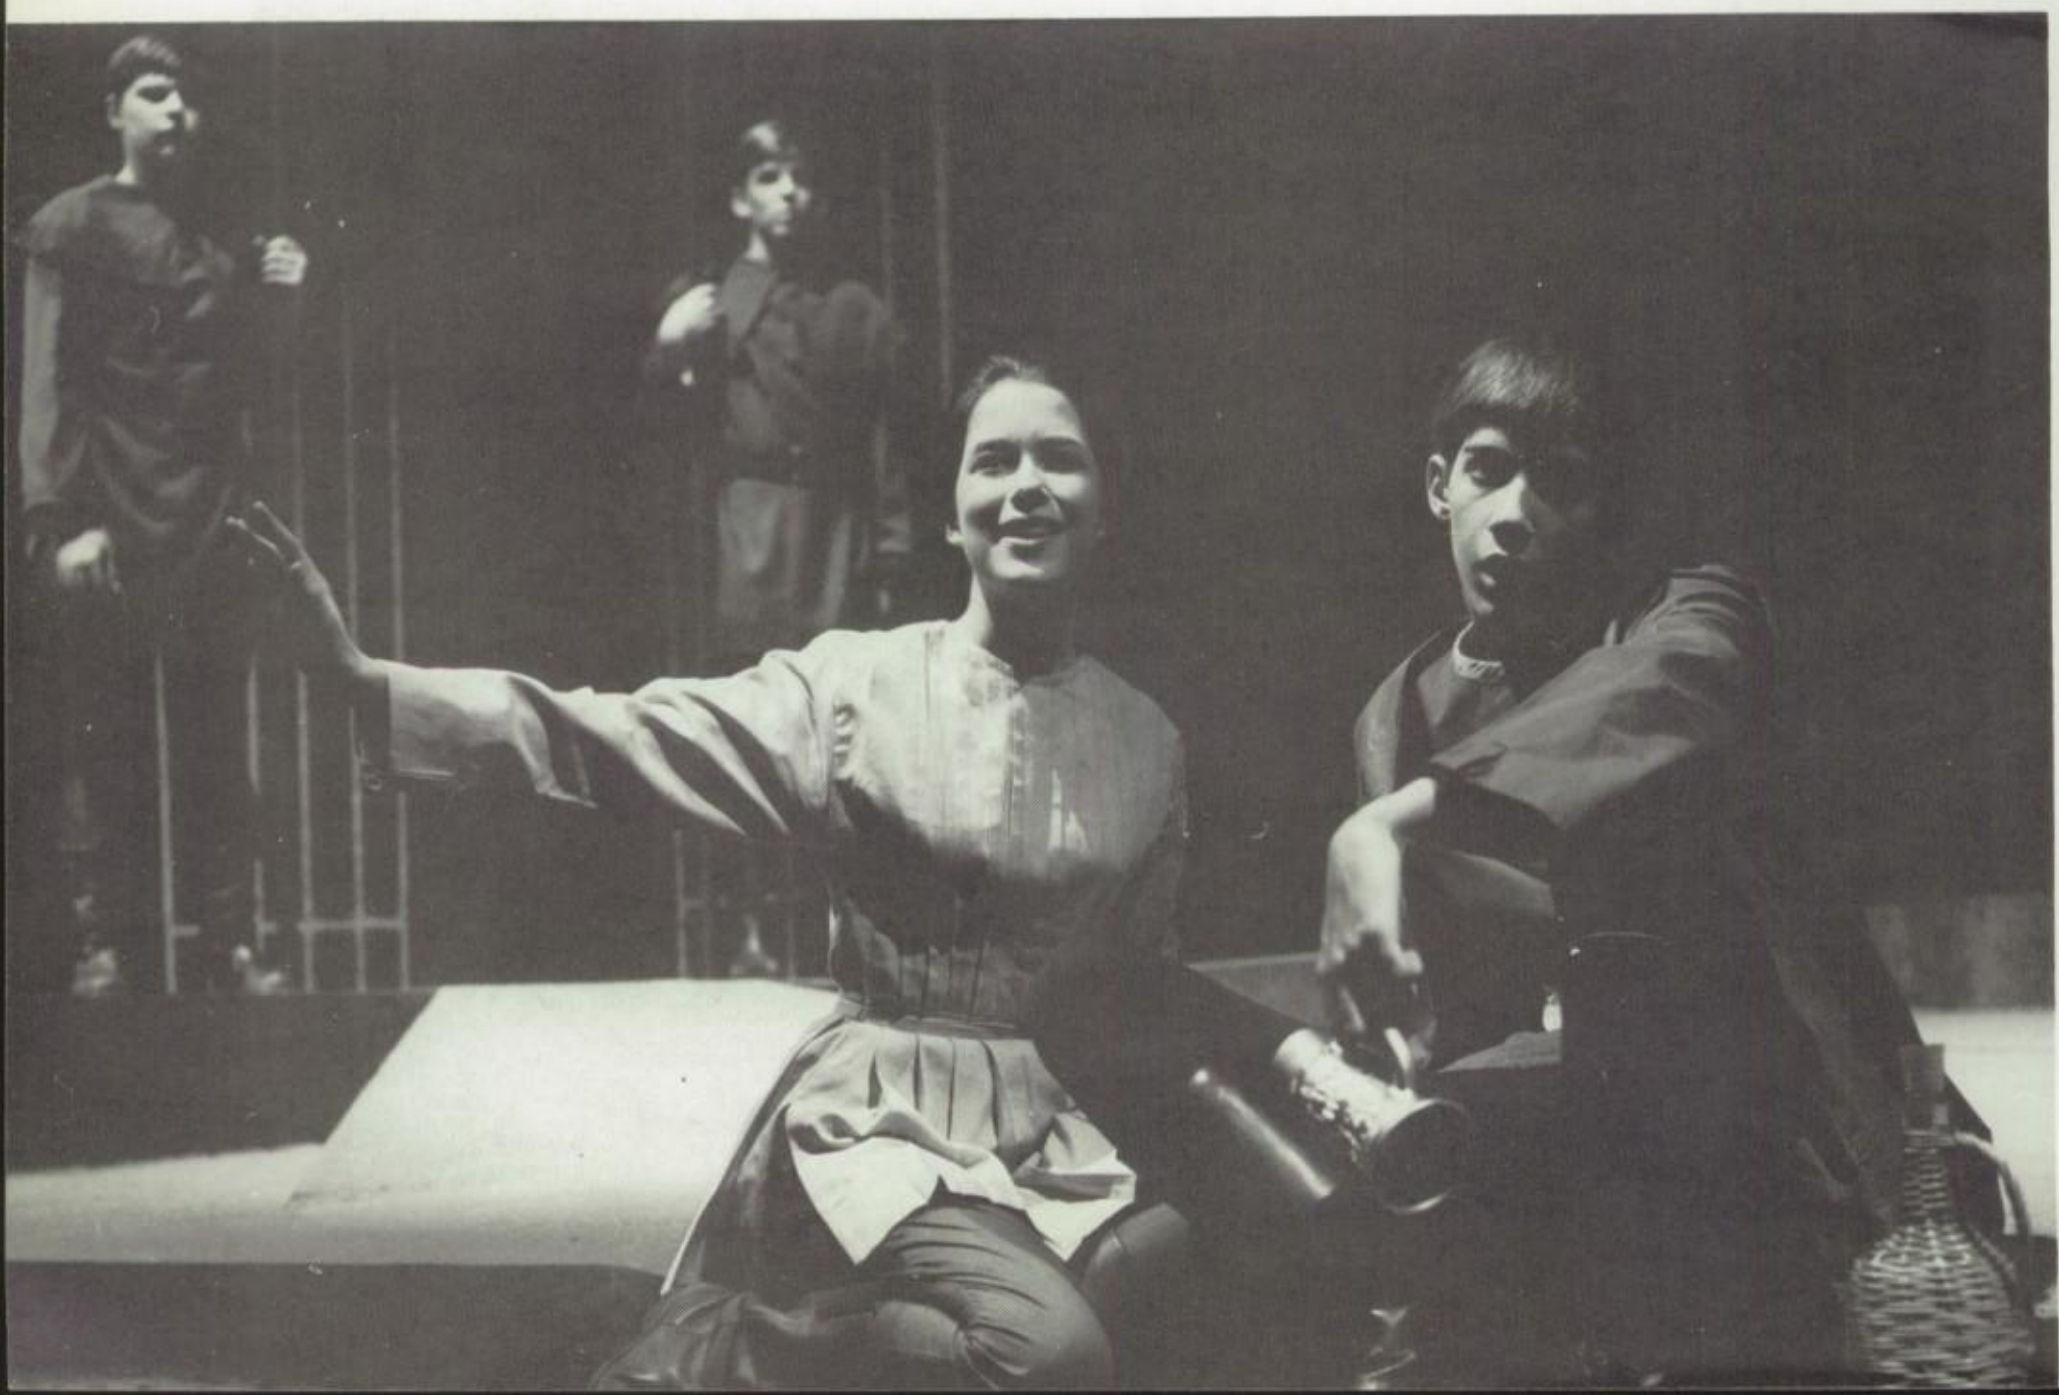
A peasant girl of Domremy raised her eyes to Heaven and heard that she was chosen to lead France against English tyranny. Her obedience to the voices that led her brought her persecution and death.

Joan of Arc, that simple and strong maid, was portrayed by Kathy Rostrom in Jean Anouilh's The Lark, presented at ETHS Nov. 12-13. Selected for its artistic and historical values, the two-act drama was directed by Mr. William Ditton and staged by Mr. Bruce Siewerth. A play of its depth and seriousness was new to the Evanston stage.

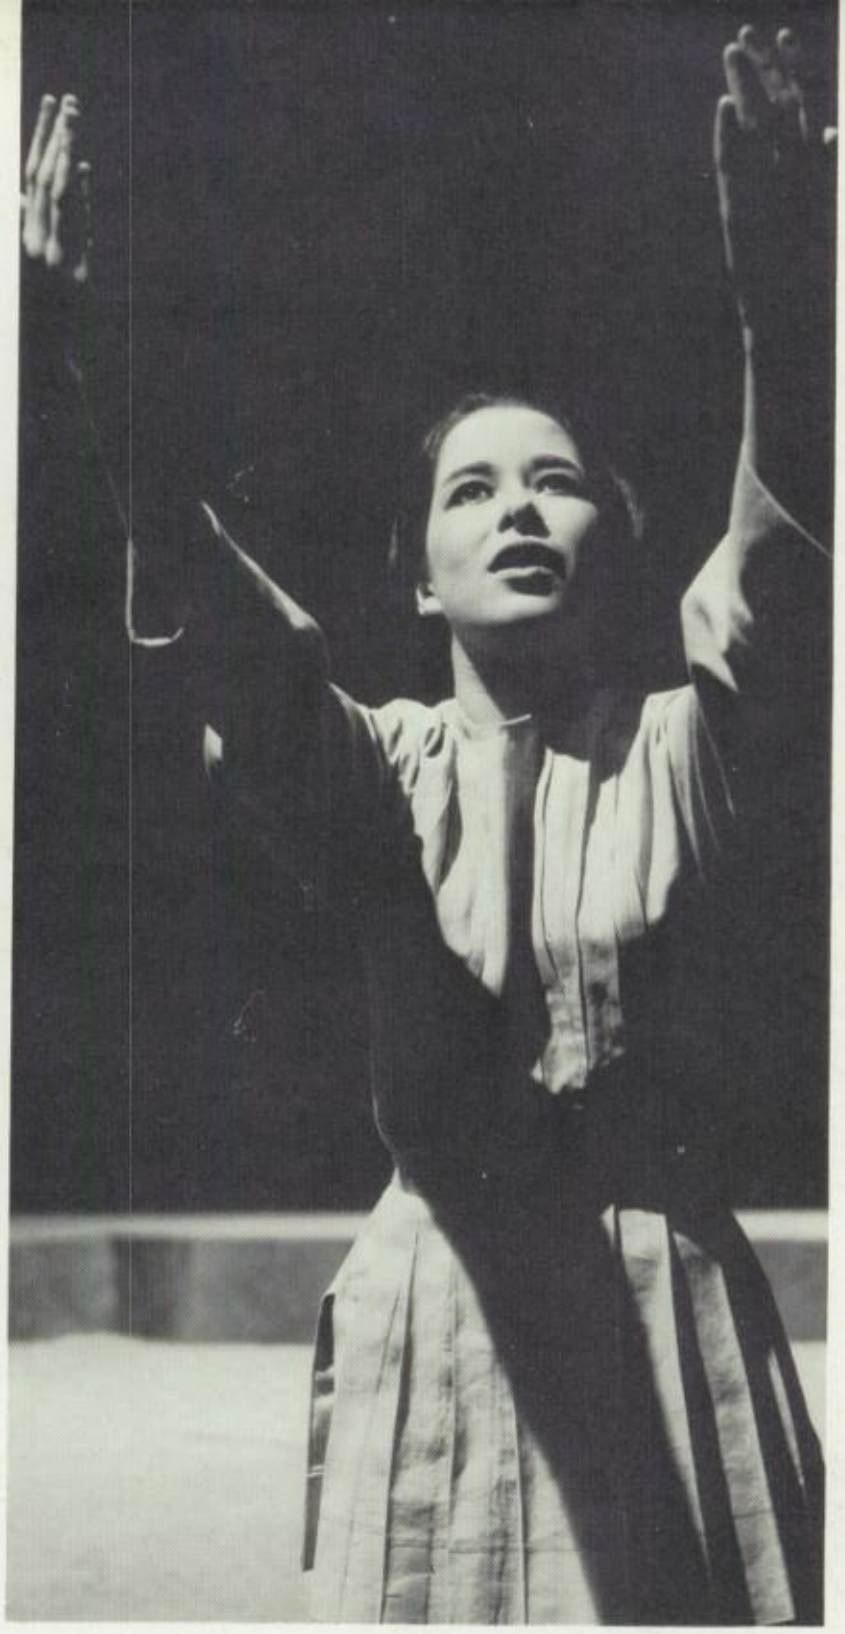
In Act I, scenes depicting instances in Joan's early life were accomplished with flashbacks and simple, movbale sets. The maid's trial, imprisonment, and execution occurring 535 years ago took place again in Act II. Lighting was varied and often elaborate, ranging from naked lumination in a prison scene to wildly colored projections of fleur-de-lis designs, fire wheels, and stained glass windows.

Also in leading roles were Jeff Emrich as the cynical English General Warwick and Bill Clewell as the veneral Bishop Cauchon. King Charles of France, played by Tim Landfield, gained courage and confidence through Joan. Among the members of the large supporting cast were Jeff Sweet, Diane Holder, Ivan Lawner, Guy Klopp, Bill Biety, Ann Taylor, Ed Clinton, and Faye Wexberg.

Kathy Rostrom as Joan of Arc persuades Guy Klopp as Robert deBeaudricourt to have faith in her visions and give her the assistance to go to the French court.



Bill Clewell as Cauchon listens in skepticism as Joan of Arc explains her reasons for circumventing Church authority to aid France.



Kathy Rostrom as Joan prays for courage to see her through her trial for heresy.

As his courtiers watch, the Dauphin gives Joan of Arc the command of the French army to lead the fight against the English and the Burgundians.

Mike Simpson, Nancy Mills, and Dan Guetzkow admire the traditional Christmas tree in the ETHS front lobby. This year's tree featured Scandinavian trimmings.

Kathy O'Neil shows helpers how to make toys for Girls Clubs' Santa's Workshop.

Christmas Spirit Pervades ETHS Halls

Fragrant pine and blazing fireplaces, carolling in English, Spanish, French, German — Christmas at ETHS, 1965. The delicate hand-made ornaments trimming the Scandinavian style tree in the main lobby were contemplated by homeroom decorations in reds and greens. Two crackling fireplaces opposite the Christmas tree attracted students to the warm homey atmosphere.

Familiar music accompanied French, Spanish, and German lyrics as foreign language clubs and classes celebrated the season. The ETHS Choir and the Symphony Orchestra, together with other Evanston singers and dancers, presented Amahl and the Night Visitors, a new addition to the annual Christmas festival of holiday music. Concluding the ETHS Christmas activities was the Senior-Alumni Tea, where last year's graduating class conferred with this year's about colleges and careers.

In a "Dandelion Wine" sequel, Vicki Stein and Linda Traub, as two little girls, frolic before narrator Tim Landfield.

Studio Theater Does 'Dandelion Wine'

Studio Theater's "Dandelion Wine," presented in the little theatre in November, was repeated as a part of the Performing Arts Festival in February.

Directed by Mrs. Janet Bauer, the production was an oral interpretation of the novel by Ray Bradbury, centered around the summertime experiences of Doug and Tom Spaulding in a small town in 1928. Among the imaginative and quaint episodes were the incident of the happiness machine, the case of the "lonely one," killer on the loose, and visiting Aunt Rose.

Three old maids, Marynell O'Brien, Collette Hill, and Debbie Landis, tiptoe fearful of the "lonely man," a murderer, on their way to the movies in a scene from the Studio Production of "Dandelion Wine."

Writers Club Produces 'Lisa'

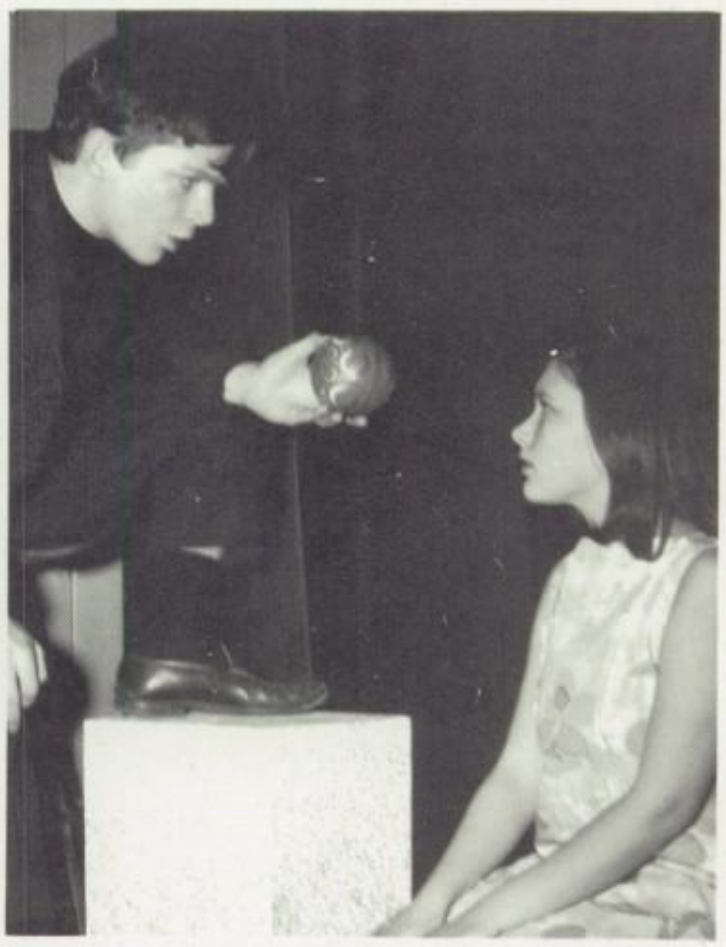
A new venture for Writers Club this year was the production of "Lisa," directed by English teachers Mrs. Marie Claire Davis and Mr. Thomas Klein.

A fantasy drama within a teenager's mind, the play, written by Northwestern University graduate student Ron Fridell, was intended to inspire ETHS students to write creatively and to prepare them for the upcoming production, "Word Workshop."

Searching for reality in the world around her, Lisa encounters Batman and other comic-book characters, mods frugging to the Beatles, and executives and secretaries listening to trees—all suggesting that the world is full of excitement and the immediate reality of living.

Cartoon characters Todd McCarthy as Robin, Ann Wagner as Wonder Woman, Jim Oher as Batman, and Lisa Elliott as Lil' Orphan Annie come alive in "Lisa," presented by Writers Club.

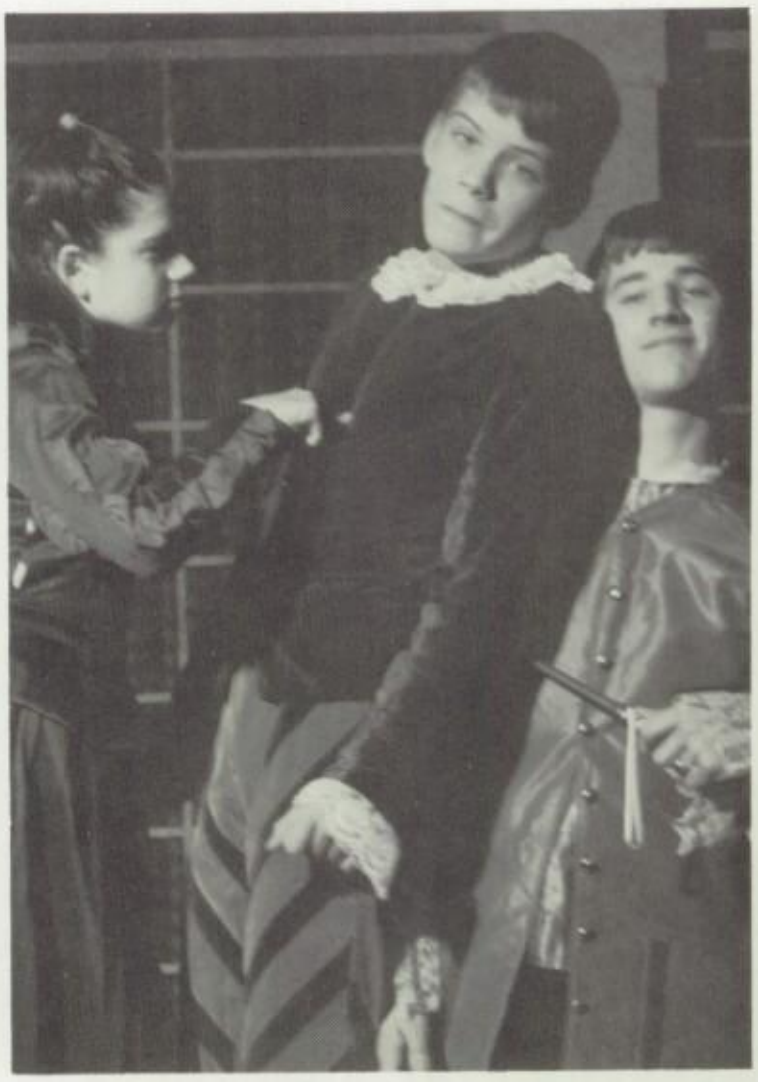
Susan Kihm does the jerk to the Pepsi jingle "Come Alive" during the "Lisa" performance.



Matt Mallory as the poet and Lisa, played by Mariana Noble, discuss the complexities of life as presented in "Lisa."

Hall Plays Precipitate School Split,

Jim Parks as Walter Mitty performs a miraculous operation as Sam Leopold and Murray Miller look on in a scene from the East Hall production.



Marcey Ganet plays Hugh Allen's henpecking wife as Tom Frederick stands by in the scene from Moliere's Doctor in Spite of Himself from the West Hall production, "Humor in the Arts."

Martha Morris and Susan Bermann bicker over Hugh Allen as John Arnold watches in Aristophanes' "The Frogs" from the West Hall production.

New Talents Emerge

East Hall launched the new hall play program with Thornton Wilder's "The Long Christmas Dinner," three fables from A Thurber Carnival, and James Thurber's "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," with piano accompaniment. Wilder's serious drama contrasted Thurber's satirical humor, according to the plan of Mrs. Doris Rudy, director.

Under the direction of Mr. Bruce Siewerth, Mr. Robert Werner and Mr. Avon Gillespie, West Hall presented The Best of the West. Comic scenes by playwrights throughout the ages were featured along with musical selection by composers from Mozart to Cole Porter.

A chorus narrated the story while the actors pantomimed the play in South Hall's production of Stephen Crane's The Red Badge of Courage, adapted to the stage and directed by Mr. William Ditton. Unusual lighting effects set the eerie and horrible mood of war.

Student written and performed, North Hall's production contrasted intellectual satire with vaudeville slapstick, using stage and screen mediums, under the supervision of Mr. Richard Rosewall and Mr. Thomas Laga.

Michael Babbitt as Henry Fleming comes across Todd Nichol as a dead comrade in Red Badge of Courage.

The Union forces take a last stand in the South Hall dramatic interpretation of Red Badge of Courage.

Ronnie McCommon as wicked Sam tries to get into heaven but is turned away by St. Peter, portrayed by Jeff Sweet, in "Wicked Sam and the Devil," written especially for the Performing Arts Festival by Jon Polifrone of Indiana State University.

Performing Arts Features Dance, Movie,

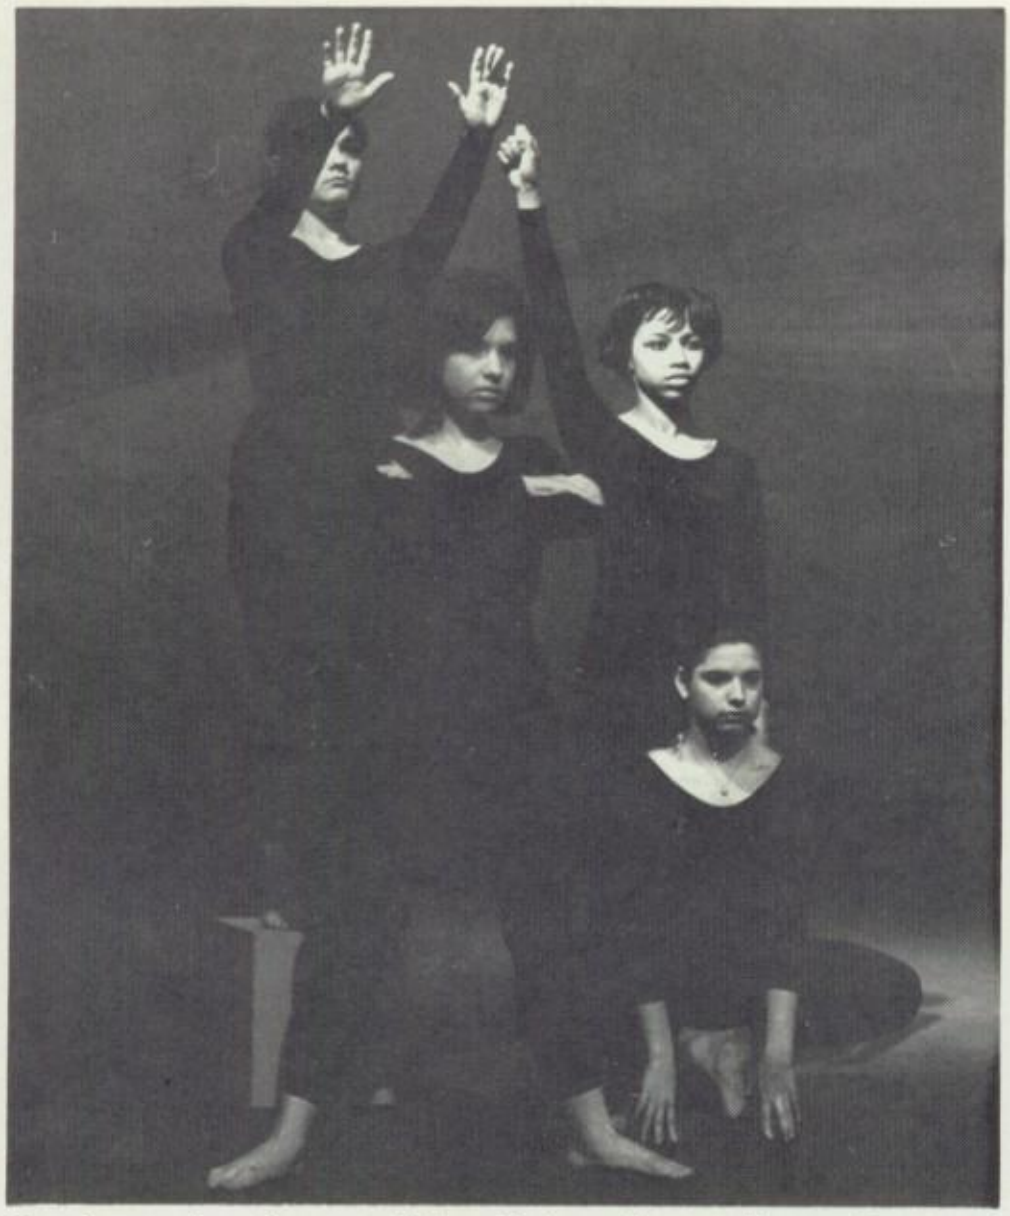
Pam Powers is frozen in action in a skit by the festival mime company.

The Festival of Performing Arts highlighted student choreographed dances and mimes, a five-minute movie, and a madrigal opera. "Dandelion Wine" was a humorous but poignant commentary on small town life in the twenties.

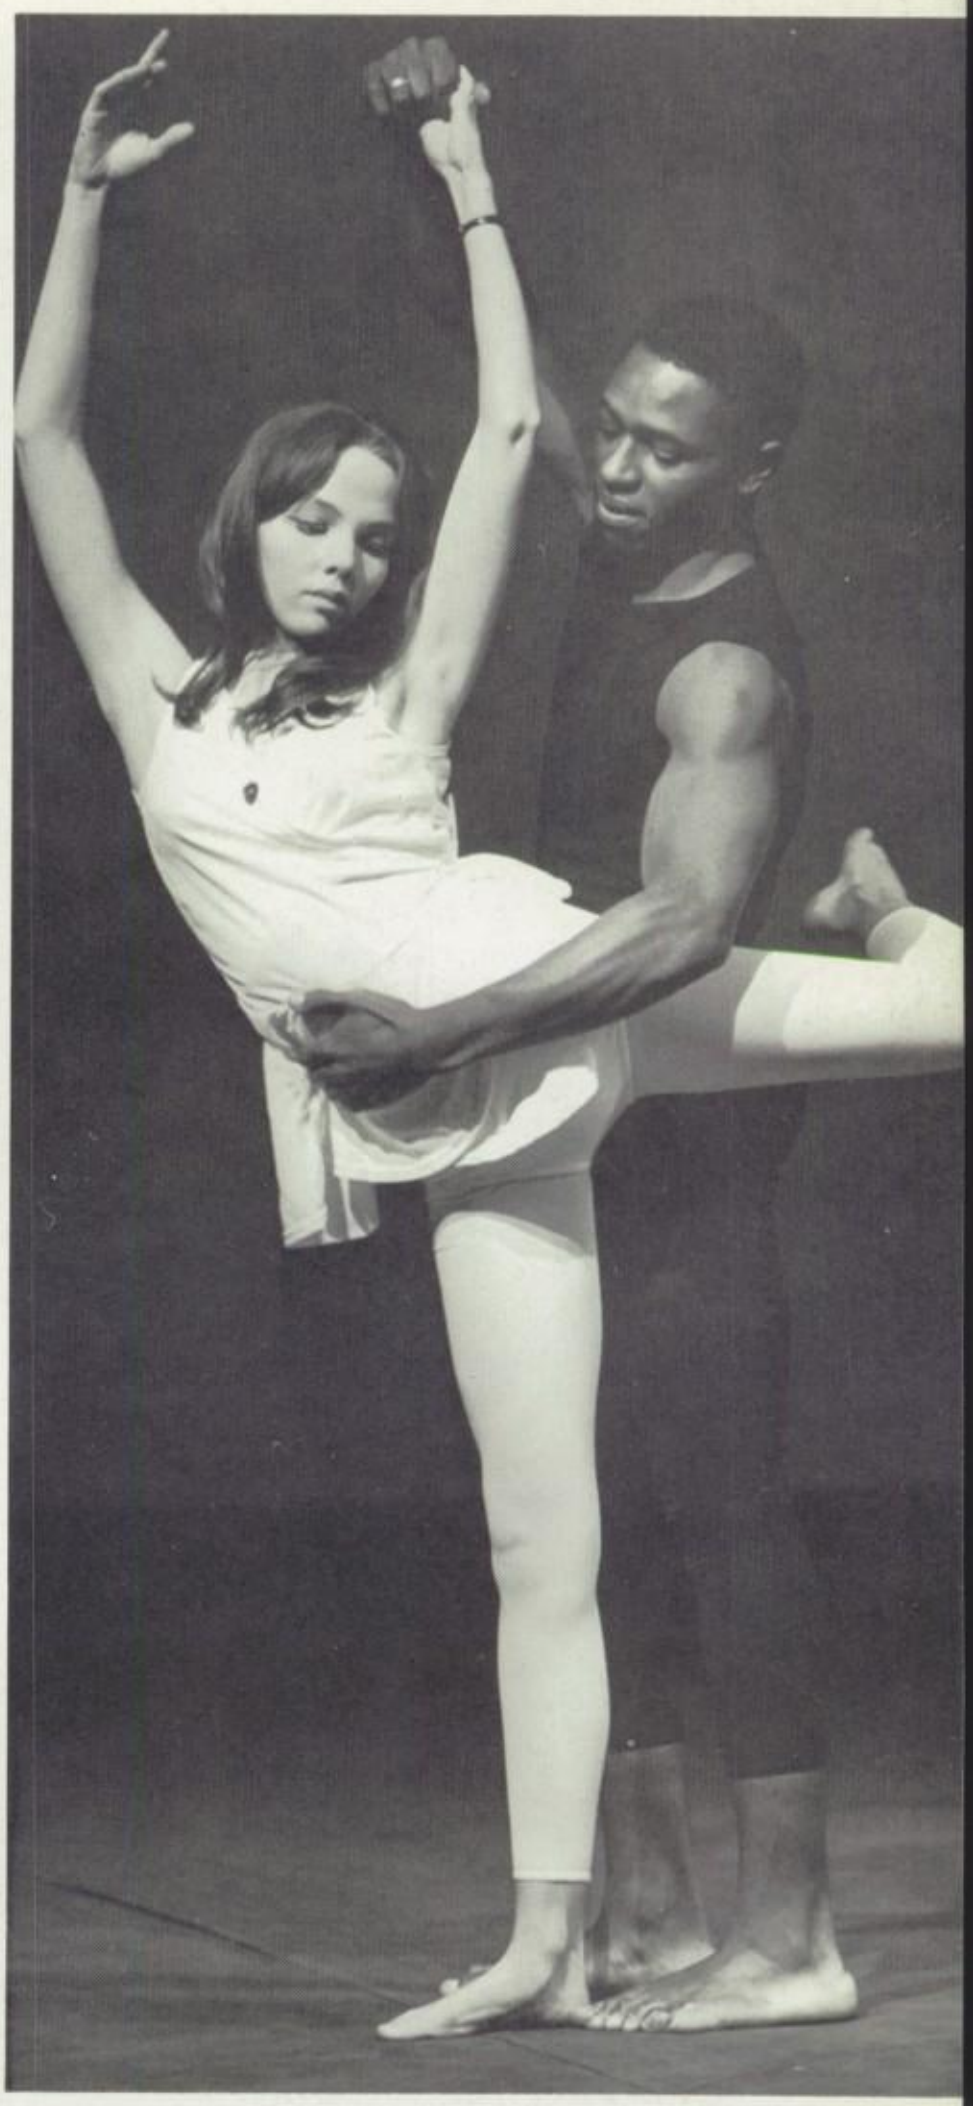
Dances choreographed and performed by members of Esande created an effect of modern simplicity and frankness, the majority tending towards a jazzy setting. Some notable exceptions were "1—1—1—1—1—1," accompanied by Bach's Fugue in G minor, "We Weave a Tangled Web," set to sounds rather than music, and "Americana," danced in ballet style.

Wearing black costumes and pasty white make-up a special company used only expression to communicate in the mime interludes. The recitation of Robert Browning's "My Last Duchess" was accompanied by a string trio playing an original composition of an airy dance.

With its colorful costumes and dazzling make-up, the art film portrayed the beauty of butterflies. "Wicked Sam and the Devil," specially composed for the Festival by Jon Polifrone of Indiana State University, was narrated in song by the ETHS choir while the story of boozer Sam searching for "a hell of his own" was acted in pantomime.



Esande members Suzanne Mitten, Barbara Turner, Marcey Ganet and President Connie South weave a tangled web in a dance pantomime during the Performing Arts Festival.



Ann Cardiff and Jim Vaughn portray two friends in "Americana," a Performing Arts Festival number.

Madrigal Opera

Jim Oher as the Duke describes the qualities of "My Last Duchess" to Mike Burris, emissary for his bride-to-be.

Humor, Simplicity Typify Festival

Esande members perform the kabuki, an Oriental number, at the Performing Arts Festival.

Jake Garfield comforts fellow devil Elaine Cohen in a scene from "Wicked Sam and the Devil," a one-act madrigal opera.

Esande dancers create a jungle atmosphere in "Conquest of Jawahabi" in the Performing Arts Festival.

'Gondoliers' Parodies Pomp and Grandeur

Set in Venice at the peak of its artistic glory, Gilbert and Sullivan's The Gondoliers, Evanston's spring production, coordinated by Mr. Richard Rosewall, boasted the elegant sets and costumes of Broadway. The pomp and grandeur was captured by huge and intricate sets of Mr. Robert Proper, speech arts teacher, and by colorful period costumes, ranging from simple peasant garments to gaudy court apparel, designed by Mr. Frank Tresise, chairman of the Art Department.

The musical freshly blended the subtle and slapstick humor in the Gilbert script. Under the direction of Mr. Robert Werner, music teacher, the Symphony Orchestra joined with 24 lead singers and over 40 chorus members to bring out the charming and highly stylistic score. Mr. Gus Giordano's choreography for the dance "Cachucha" and Mr. Bruce Siewerth's lighting effects further heightened the drama and added a professional touch.

Luiz and Casilda, the romantic if ridiculous young couple, were portrayed by Bill Williams and Neil Bogaard, and Kathy Davidson and Becky Whitehouse. David Scott and James Vey played the gondolier Marco, and John Reid and Allan Brittin shared the role of Marco's brother, Guiseppe. Gianetta was portrayed by Linda Erickson and Diane Glasberg, and Tessa by Anita Bonham and Janet Slavin.

Guiseppe, Alan Brittin, comforts Tessa, Janet Slavin, after they learn of their impending separation.

Becky Whitehouse as Casilda sings her sorrow upon learning she must end her love affair with Luiz because she is betrothed to another.

Marco, James Vey, Gianetta, Diane Glasberg, Guiseppe, Alan Brittin, and Tessa, Janet Slavin, celebrate a double wedding before the contadine and gondoliers.

Guy Klopp as Don Alhambra de Bolero reveals that an unknown prince is living among the gondoliers.

Dave Scott as Marco explains to Guiseppe, John Reid, Gianetta, Linda Erickson, and Tessa, Anita Bonham, the luxuries of nobility.

Intricate Sets Highlight 'The Gondoliers'

Bill Rehfield as the duke sings about his daughter's impending marriage.

Kathleen Davidson as Casilda says a final goodbye to Luiz, Albert Williams, her drummer-boy sweetheart.

Milton Frank sings of the trials of gondoliers to the chorus of contadine and gondoliers.

Football Team Captures Suburban Title

With three shutouts and a record of seven wins and one loss, the 1965 varsity football team captured first place in the Suburban League for the seventh time in nine years under Coach Murney Lazier.

Coach Lazier predicted at the beginning of the season that the team would have its work cut out for it in confronting New Trier, Oak Park, and Waukegan. But the only problem of the three was New Trier, which ruined ETHS's 11-game winning streak. The defeat by the Indians marked the first time in 15 years that Evanston had been defeated on its home field by New Trier.

Ending the season in first place required perseverance on the part of all the football players. Evanston seemed securely in first place in the SL by its third game, after victories over Proviso East, Niles East, and Waukegan. Then the Wildkits lost to New Trier and found themselves in a four-way tie for first place that was not broken until the final game. New Trier and Proviso were defeated by other teams while Evanston went on to defeat Morton East, Oak Park, and Highland Park, gaining revenge over the latter squad for the only ETHS loss in 1964.

Nine players were all-Suburban League selections: Randy Calm, Joe Jones, Mike Lazier, Bill Majewski, John Nance, Mike Phillips, Doug Redmann, Bill Seyl, and Bill Shollenberger. Phillips and Redmann were chosen for all-state teams.

Cheerleaders, Willies Boost Spirit

Evanston and New Trier cheerleaders trade secrets during football game halftime.

Neither rain nor snow nor sleet nor cold discouraged cheerleaders and Willie Wildkits in their efforts to keep school spirit running high at ETHS. Braving broken bones, 30-degree football weather, and penny-tossing, the girls directed the cheers that led Evanston teams to victory.

Under the sponsorship of Miss Bonnie Bauer, this year's cheerleading squad developed two innovations. First, the varsity cheerleaders split into two smaller groups that led cheers separately. When more than one sports activity was going on at the same time, one group attended each game.

Second, starting this year the cheerleaders were present at every sports event. Captained by Debbie Shollenberger and Torene Anderson, the girls practiced long hours to perfect their yells in preparation for games.

Girls are allowed to be cheerleaders only two of their last three years of high school, but each girl must try out each year if she wishes to continue a second year.

The Willie Wildkits, eight girls sponsored by Mrs. Marilyn Kemp, were also present at all sports activities. They were required to maintain a 3.5 grade average and were chosen on a basis of creativity and spirit. Willie Wildkit captains were Wendy McNair and Laurel Dillehay.

Cross Country Places Second in League

From a fast takeoff of four successive meet victories, the varsity cross country team paced itself to a second place finish behind New Trier in 1965 Suburban League standings. The squad, coached by David Stern, was led by Hank Klayman, Dave Abernathy, Bob Harris, and Lee Nichols.

The well-balanced team could not compile the necessary points for a long-desired New Trier defeat and ended the season with a 5-2 record. Evanston placed second in the district meet and thirteenth in state meet competition.

Juniors Todd Smith, Harold Rosner, Steve Ritter, Ray Day and others, along with members of the sophomore cross country squad, will pair up for the 1966 cross country season.

Soccer Team Completes Undefeated Season

Jesse Sibert heads the ball in a training routine to demonstrate team control.

"We were extremely well balanced, with no real weak spots but many strengths. The team's spirit and desire to work was terrific; it was the kind of group that really makes coaching fun," said Head Coach Ken McGonagle.

The varsity soccer squad dominated the state for the second straight year with another undefeated season and election to the Illinois soccer championship. The team scored 31 goals in 10 games, a record.

With a 9-0-1 season, the soccer squad demonstrated peak performance with proficient team cooperation. Co-captains Rafael Salvatierra and Dave Trace, along with goalie Miles Zaremski on defense, led scoring attacks. High scorers for the championship team were Dave Trace, eight goals; Jesse Sibert, five; George Merubia, four; and Lester White, four.

The sophomore team, 7-1-2, tied for state sophomore soccer leadership, while the frosh led the state with 6-0-2.

Basketball Team Ties For Fourth Spot in SL

Despite persistent injuries and illnesses, Evanston's varsity basketball team finished in a fourth-place tie with Waukegan in Suburban League competition. After a good start, Evanston began to slacken off after the loss of Don Grant because of an ankle fracture, yet the Kits ended the season with a 9-5 SL record. Forward Roy Houston finished second in SL individual point standings with 268 and was chosen for the all-Suburban League first team.

The game probably most indicative of the team's capabilities was against New Trier Feb. 11, when the Indians, first in league standings, bowed to Evanston.

Evanston played what Coach John Burmaster called its best game against Proviso East, and the same weekend set a team record against Highland Park with 103 points. The unhappiest moment of the season arrived in regional tournament play, when New Trier edged out the Kits by a last-second basket, eliminating Evanston from further play.

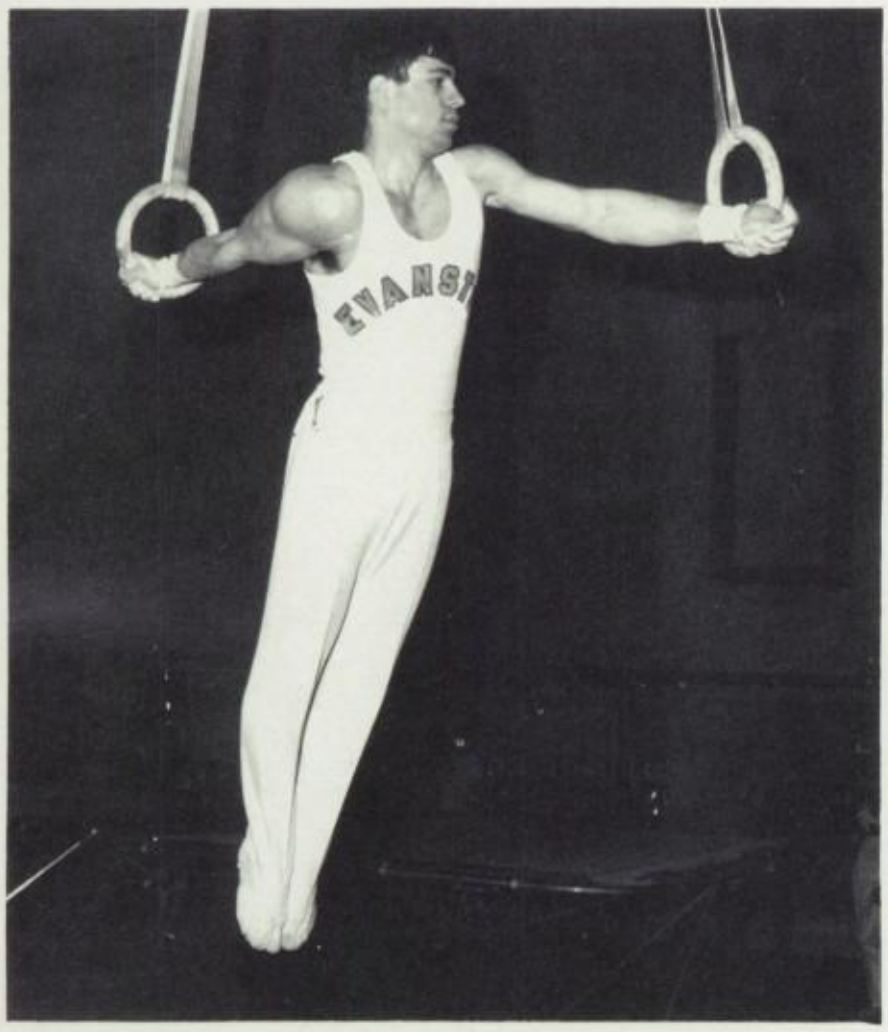
Gymnasts Tie for First in Suburban League



Varsity gymnast Metin Cambel completes the Olympic cross on rings, exhibiting the skill that brought him sixth in the state.

Gymnast Richard Crim led the Wildkits to fifth place in the state by capturing first on the trampoline, the team's strongest event. Mark Yedor and Bill Rondinella placed fifth and sixth on the trampoline, while Metin Cambel took sixth on the rings and Lee Wayman took fourth on the parallel bars. Evanston followed Proviso East, Willowbrook, Arlington, and Niles West.

Evanston tied with Proviso East for first in the Suburban League, with Crim again taking first on the trampoline. The Kits were second to Proviso in wins, but since the Kits beat them in a dual meet, they tied for first. Although the only dual meet Evanston lost was against Arlington, the Proviso East meet was the high point of the season, according to Coach Ron Walden, because the Kits beat the state champions.

Wrestlers Take Second In Suburban League

In their best performance in four years, Evanston wrestlers under Coach Elias George took eighth in the state out of 99 contenders, with one state champion, Guy Ward in the 133-lb. class. Other contenders who reached the state meet were Rick Williams and Stu Warren.

After taking second to Waukegan in the Suburban League with a 5-2 record, the Kits won third in the sectionals, held at ETHS for the first time. Since none of the three state contenders is a senior, there is an indication of even greater strength next season.

Frequent winners on the mats during the season, in addition to Ward, Williams, and Warren, were John Elsen, John Burns, Eddie Johnson, Errol Wilson, John Williams, and Mike Phillips.

Evanston swimmers established two state records while placing third in the state meet behind New Trier East and Hinsdale Central. Fred Southward set the first record, a 3:53.9 time in the 400-yard freestyle. Divers Gary Phillips and Dave Darling took first and second places, the first time one school won both.

The third place was no surprise, however, because the Kits had already been beaten by both schools in dual meets and New Trier had topped Evanston in the Suburban League.

Completing the season with a 12-2 dual meet record, Evanston displayed strength in nearly all events under the leadership of Coaches Dobbie Burton and John Walker.

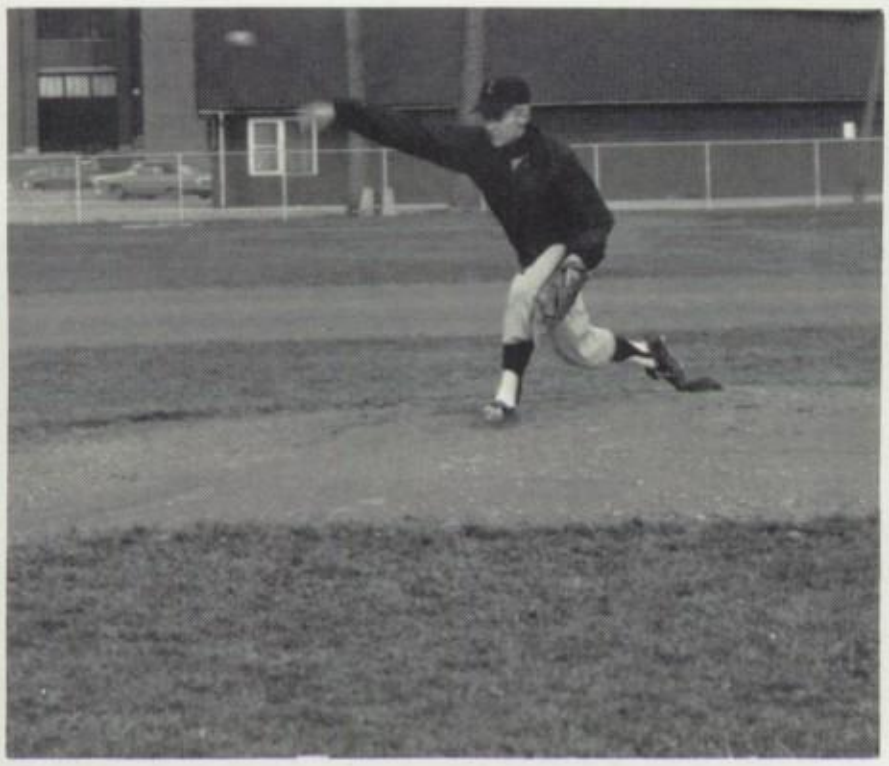
Baseball, Track Complete Successful Seasons

Evanston's indoor track team took first in the SL meet after an undefeated season, partially because of senior Roy Houston, who holds the national record in the broad jump.

The baseball squad opened their season with two shutouts and a strong defense, averaging one error a game. With three returning lettermen, the golf squad hoped to improve its 6-3 record of last year, while the tennis team worked to build a stronger team for next year.



Varsity hurler Jon Cohlmeyer leads the team in batting practice.

Josh Hoffman gives the outfielders some exercise.

The three track teams work out in preparation for the Palatine meet.

Girls Tennis, Badminton Compete Interscholastically

In its fourth year of competition, the girls tennis team placed second in the eight-member North Suburban Tennis League. Ending the season with a 5-1-1 record, the 13-girl team did not take first place for the first time.

The team, sponsored by Mrs. Barbara Rubin, fell to Maine South two matches to four and tied Niles West three matches each. Niles East, Maine East, Deerfield, Maine West, and Glenbrook South fell to Evanston.

The girls badminton team played a similar schedule to that of the tennis team. Coached by Mrs. Bonnie Walker, the 19-member team included girls selected from the intramural badminton program.

Intramurals Climax With Field Day

The purpose of intramural sports is two-fold: to establish hall and homeroom competition and to allow persons not competing in inter-school sports a chance to participate in afterschool sports. Everyone is eligible to participate unless he is on a school team, and there is enough diversity to give most people an opportunity for their favorite sport. Girls intramurals also provide instruction for girls seeking it.

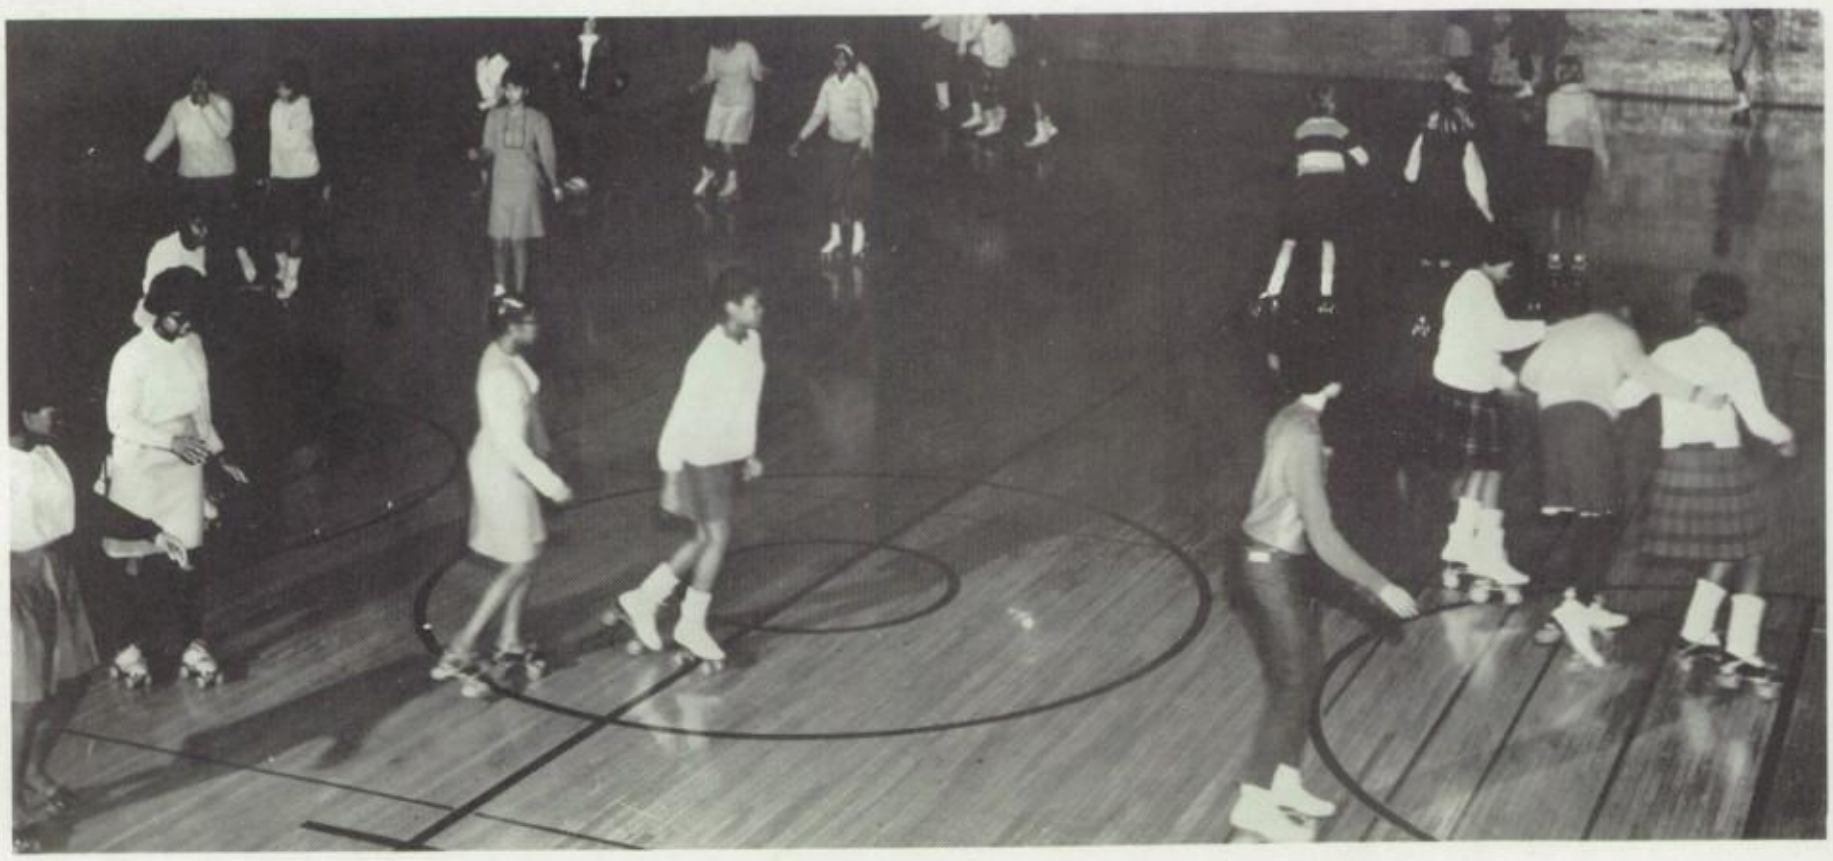
Every night of the week some intramural sport was open. For the first time a coed sport was introduced: Riflery was held at a range set up under 164, with rifles, ammunition, and targets furnished by the school with a small student charge to cover the costs.

Girls who had competed in intramural tennis and badminton were eligible to play on the school teams, and girls who had excelled at swimming were encouraged to join Aquettes.

Intra-school sports came to a climax during Girls Olympics and Field Day when all students were encouraged to support their homerooms by participating.

Mr. William Bunn, head of the intramural program, planned and ran most of the activities open to boys after school.

Dave Sondheimer prepares to return a serve in a ping-pong match for West Hall, played in ping-pong alley.



Girls rollerskating, a winter intramural activity in the girls gym, featured skating to recorded music.

Nancy Schmidt and Chris Pollock await the birdie in girls intramural badminton.

Larry Herod fights for the ball for the East Hall team in a boys intramural basketball match.

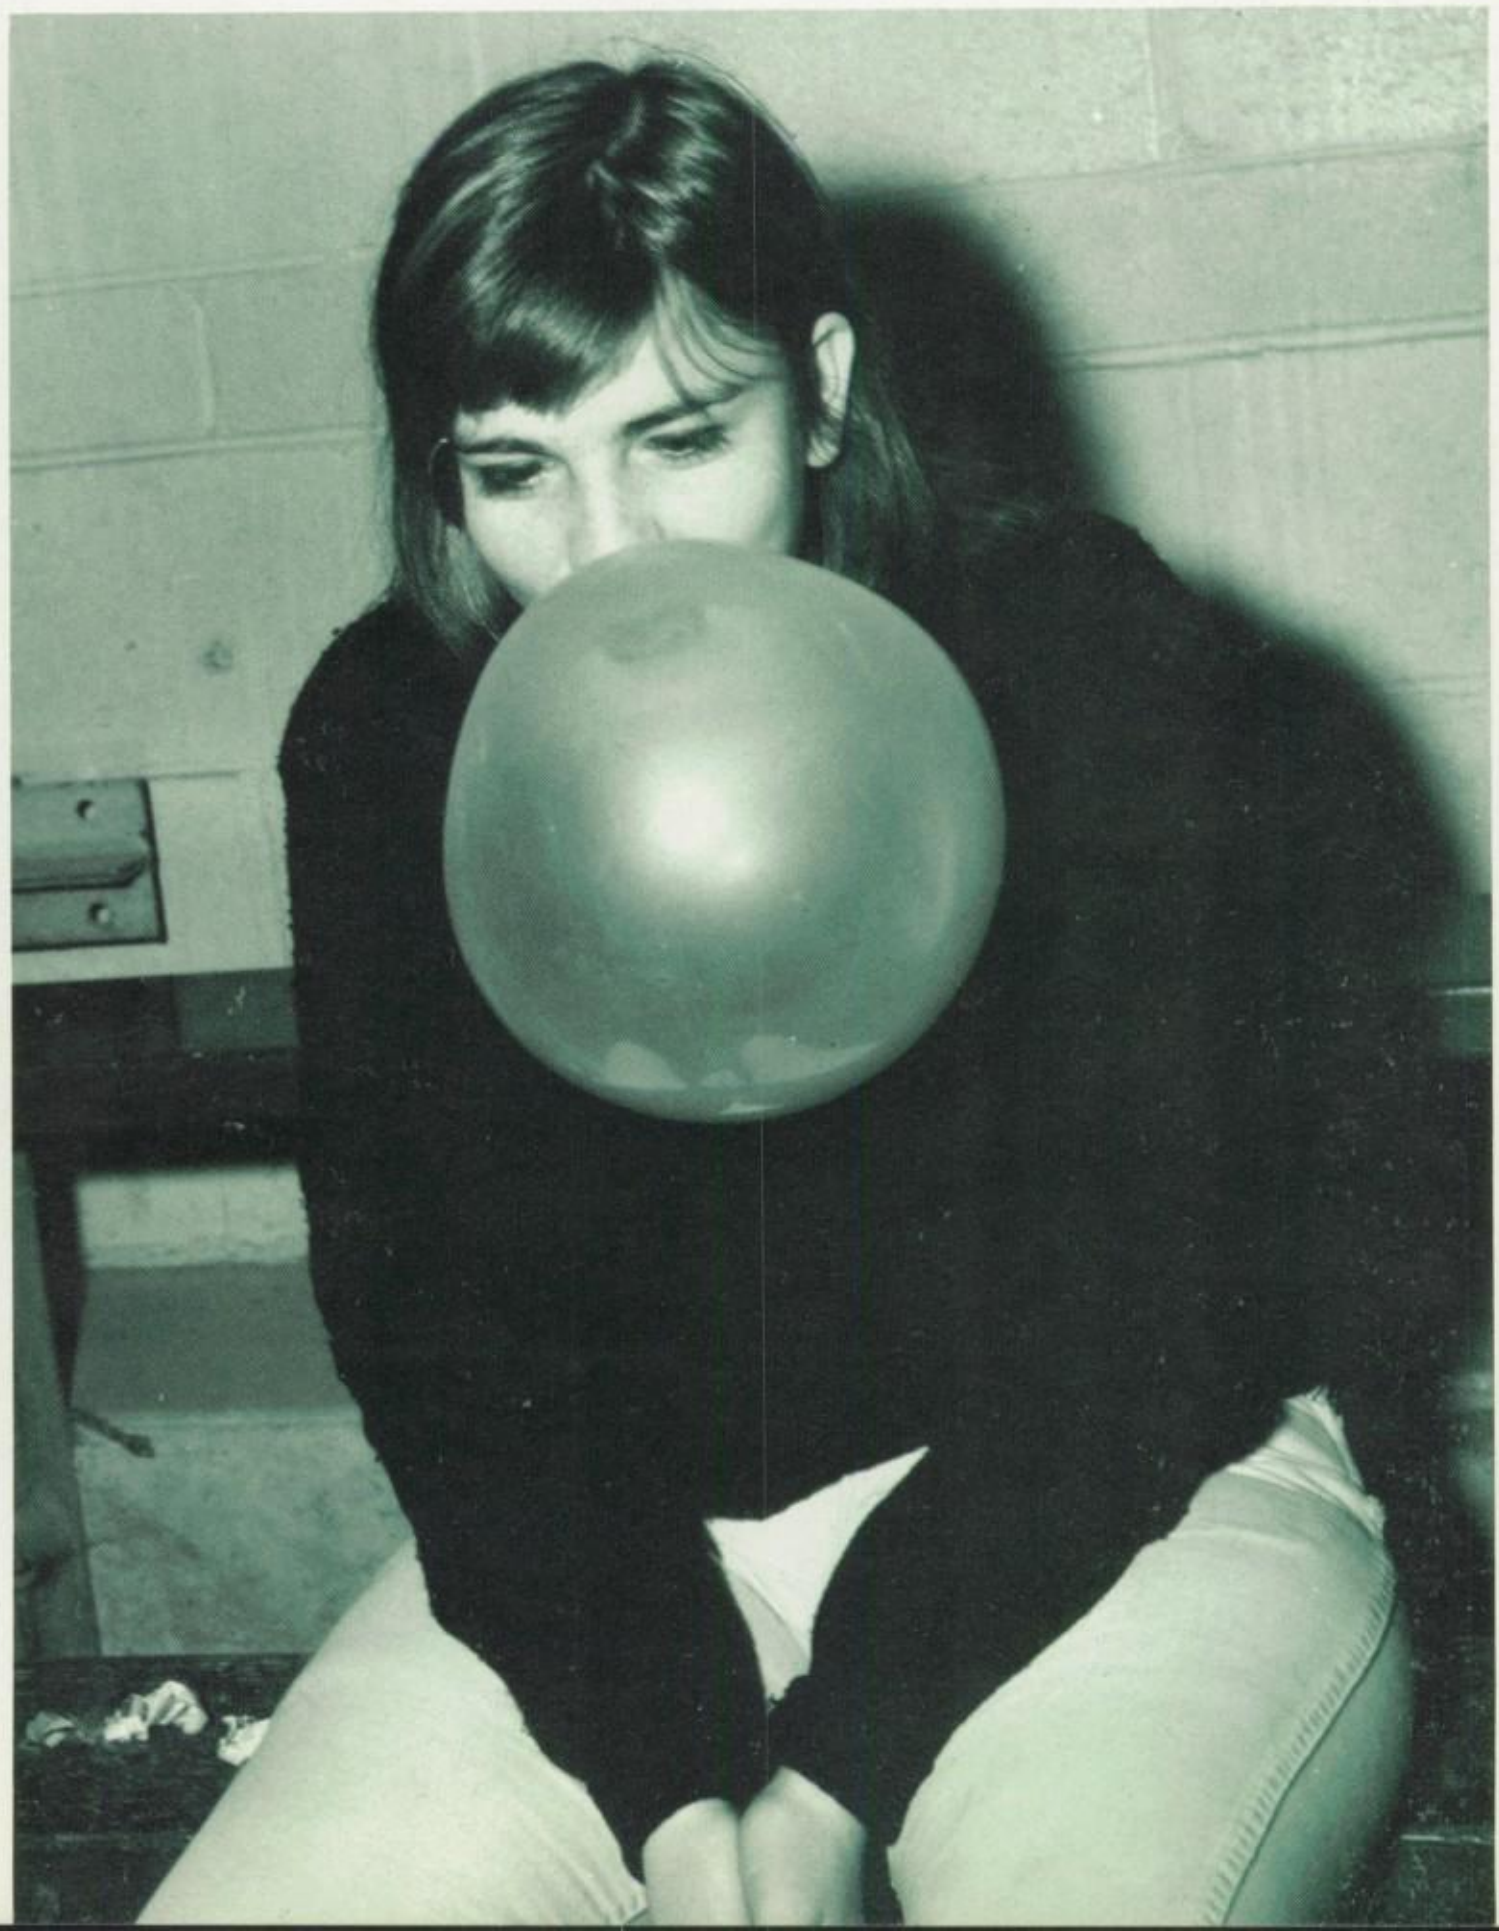
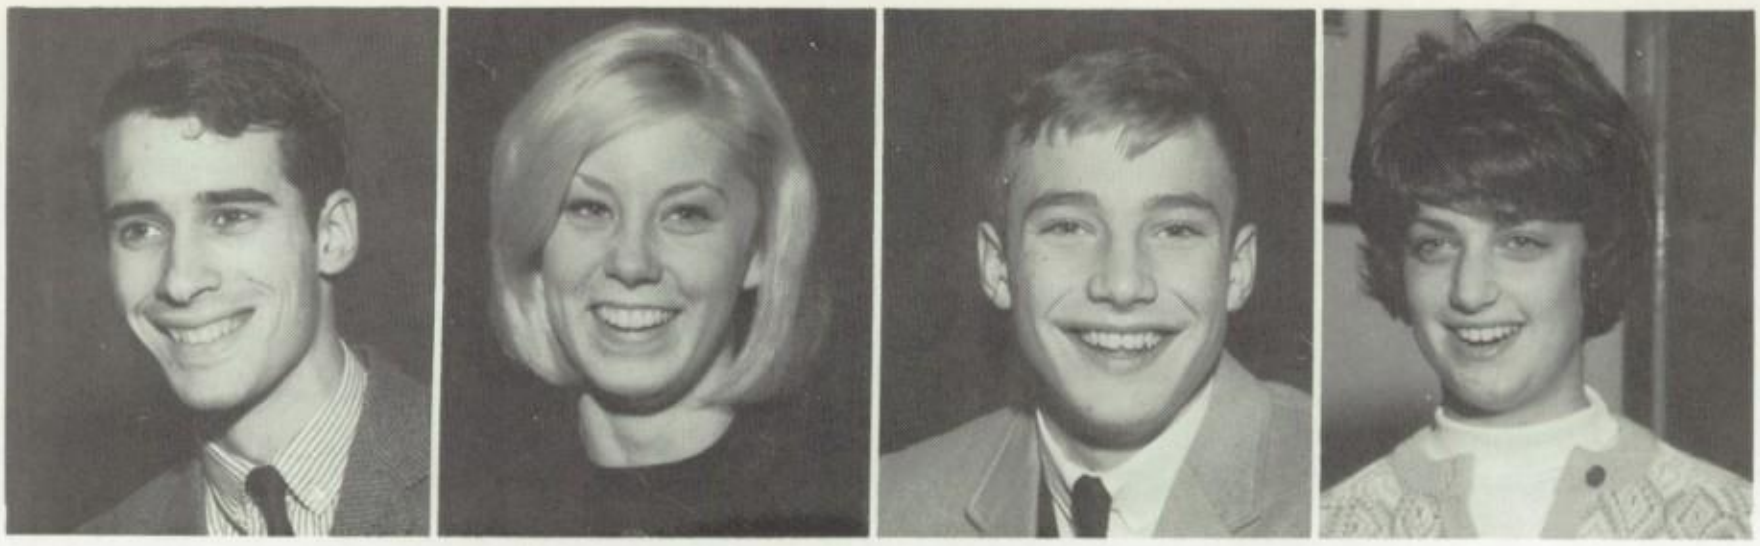
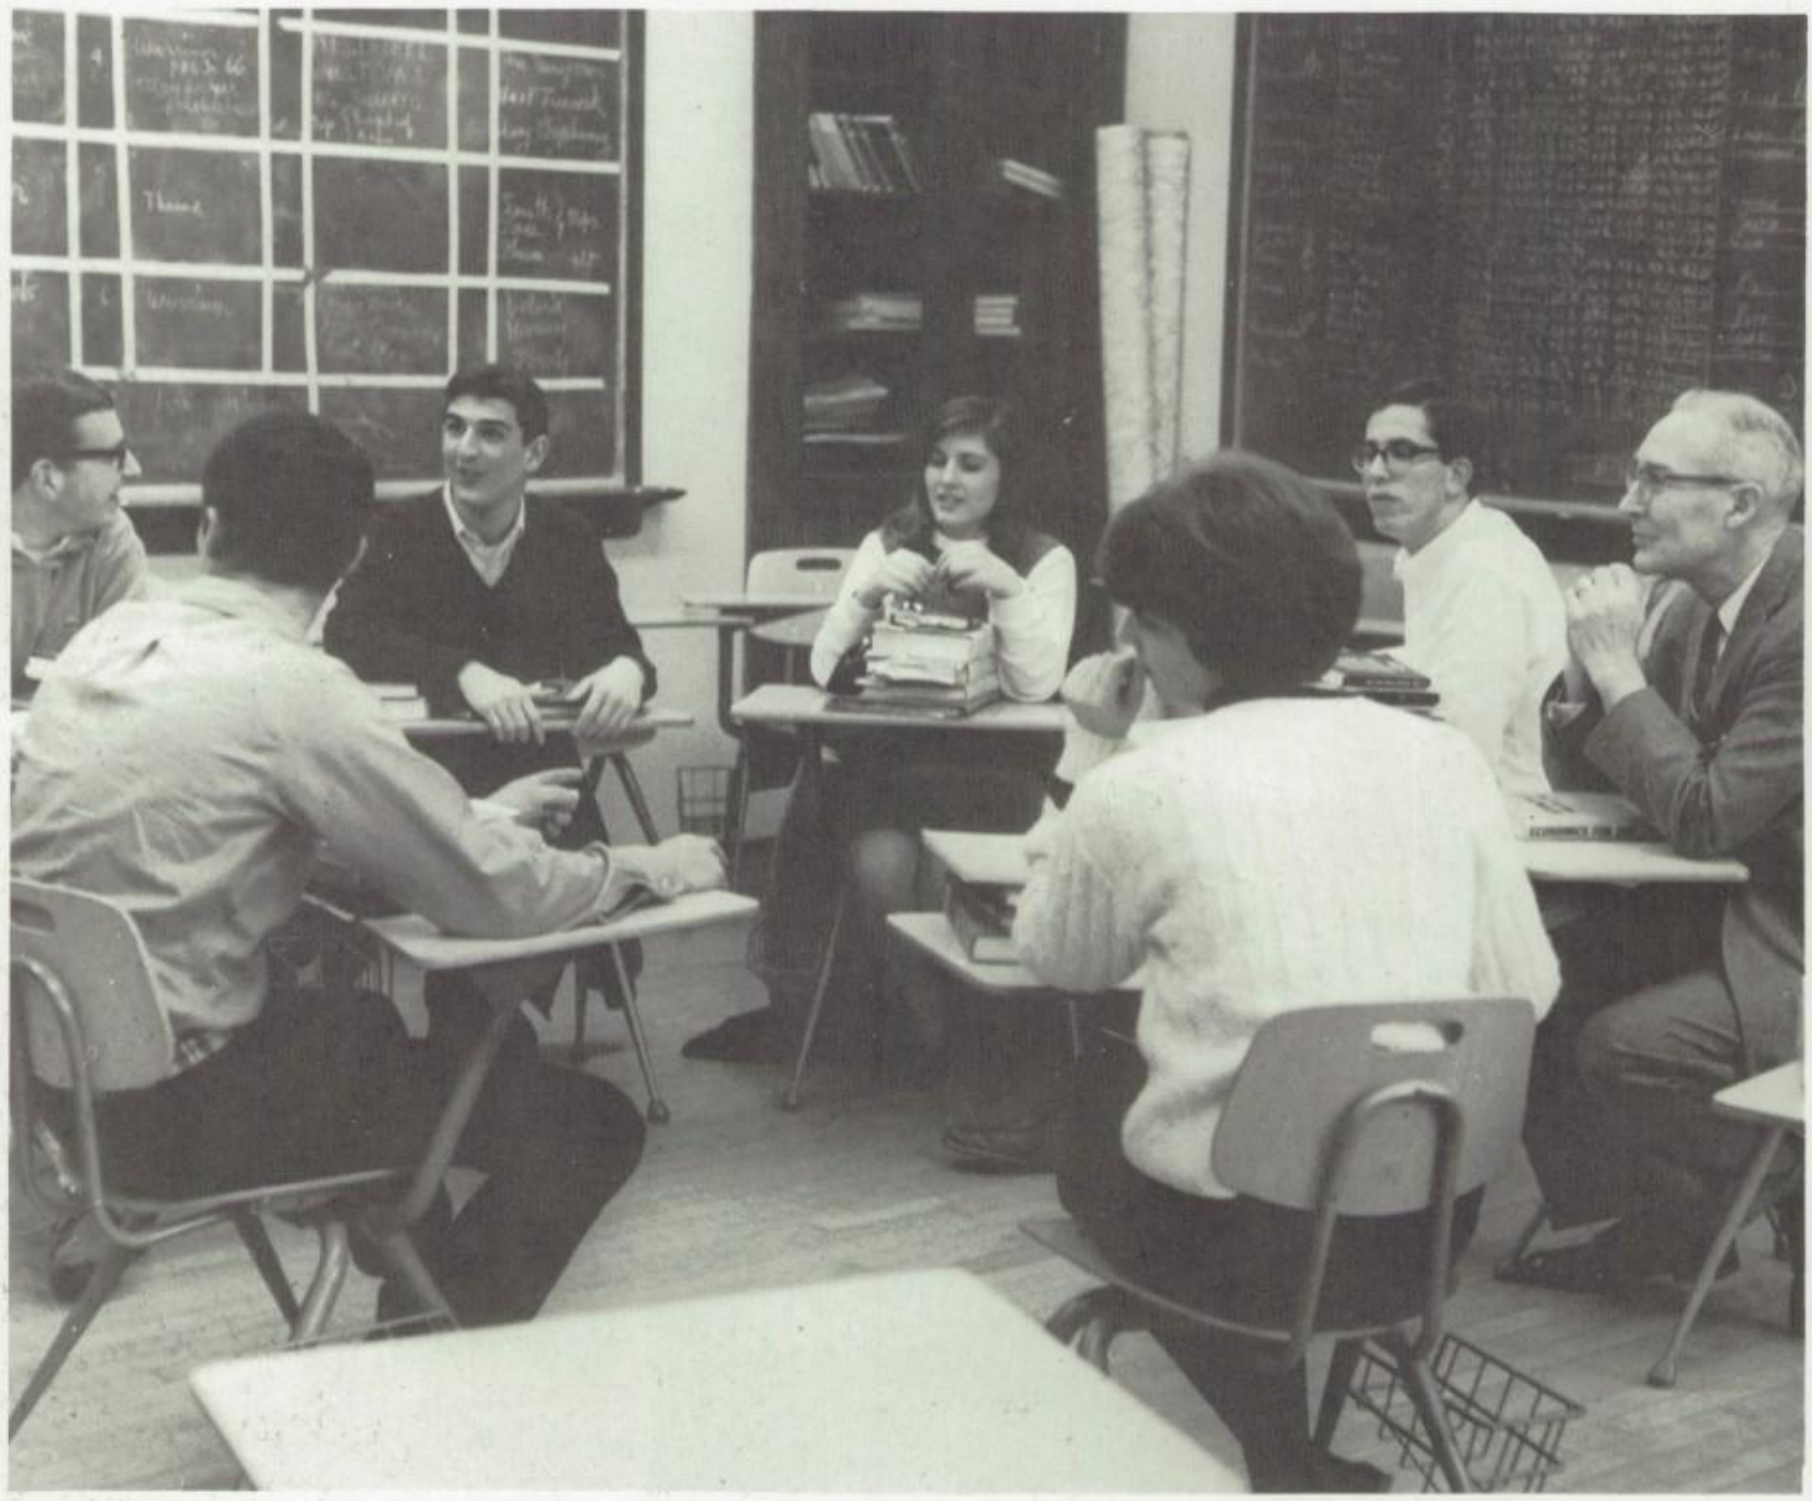
Seniors





Senior Class officers: Josh Hoffman, president; Russie Bagott, vice-president; Rick Hoel, treasurer; Charlotte Coleman, secretary.



The Senior Board discusses plans for the senior movie.

At Last We Were Seniors

At last it was our turn to be seniors, respected, envied, admired. We were the most sophisticated, oldest, and wisest members of the student body: authorities on ETHS.

We alone occupied the student lounge, the first floor of Beardsley Gym, and the middle section of the auditorium. We gleefully finishd our last spring exams. One was crowned Homecoming Queen, another elected Central Council president, another chosen Student Body in Yamo '65. We laughed the hardest at our senior movie and danced till dawn at our Senior Prom.

But our intelligence and diligence earned us our prestige. We questioned Undersecretary of State George Ball and explored race relations, student protest, religion, and the draft. Fifty-one received National Merit Letters of Commendation and 17 ranked National Merit Scholarship semifinalists. Hundreds sighed with relief as the college acceptance notices arrived. Wasn't it years since we sweated through CEEB, ACT, and AP exams and dashed out college appications—planning, pondering, praying?

We balanced labor with fun and activitiy. Proudly, we saw our productions of The Gondoliers and The Lark and watched our football team tackle the Suburban League championship. Participating in balloon races, tug-of-wars, and egg-tossing contests, we forgot our dignity on Senior Day. We gazed at the Scandinavian Christmas tree. We waited in line for school rings, bought our last budget tickets, and bade the birdcage goodby.

We rose, rose for Evanston for the last time as the Senior Class and sang "We'll be true to Evanston" for the first time with full meaning.

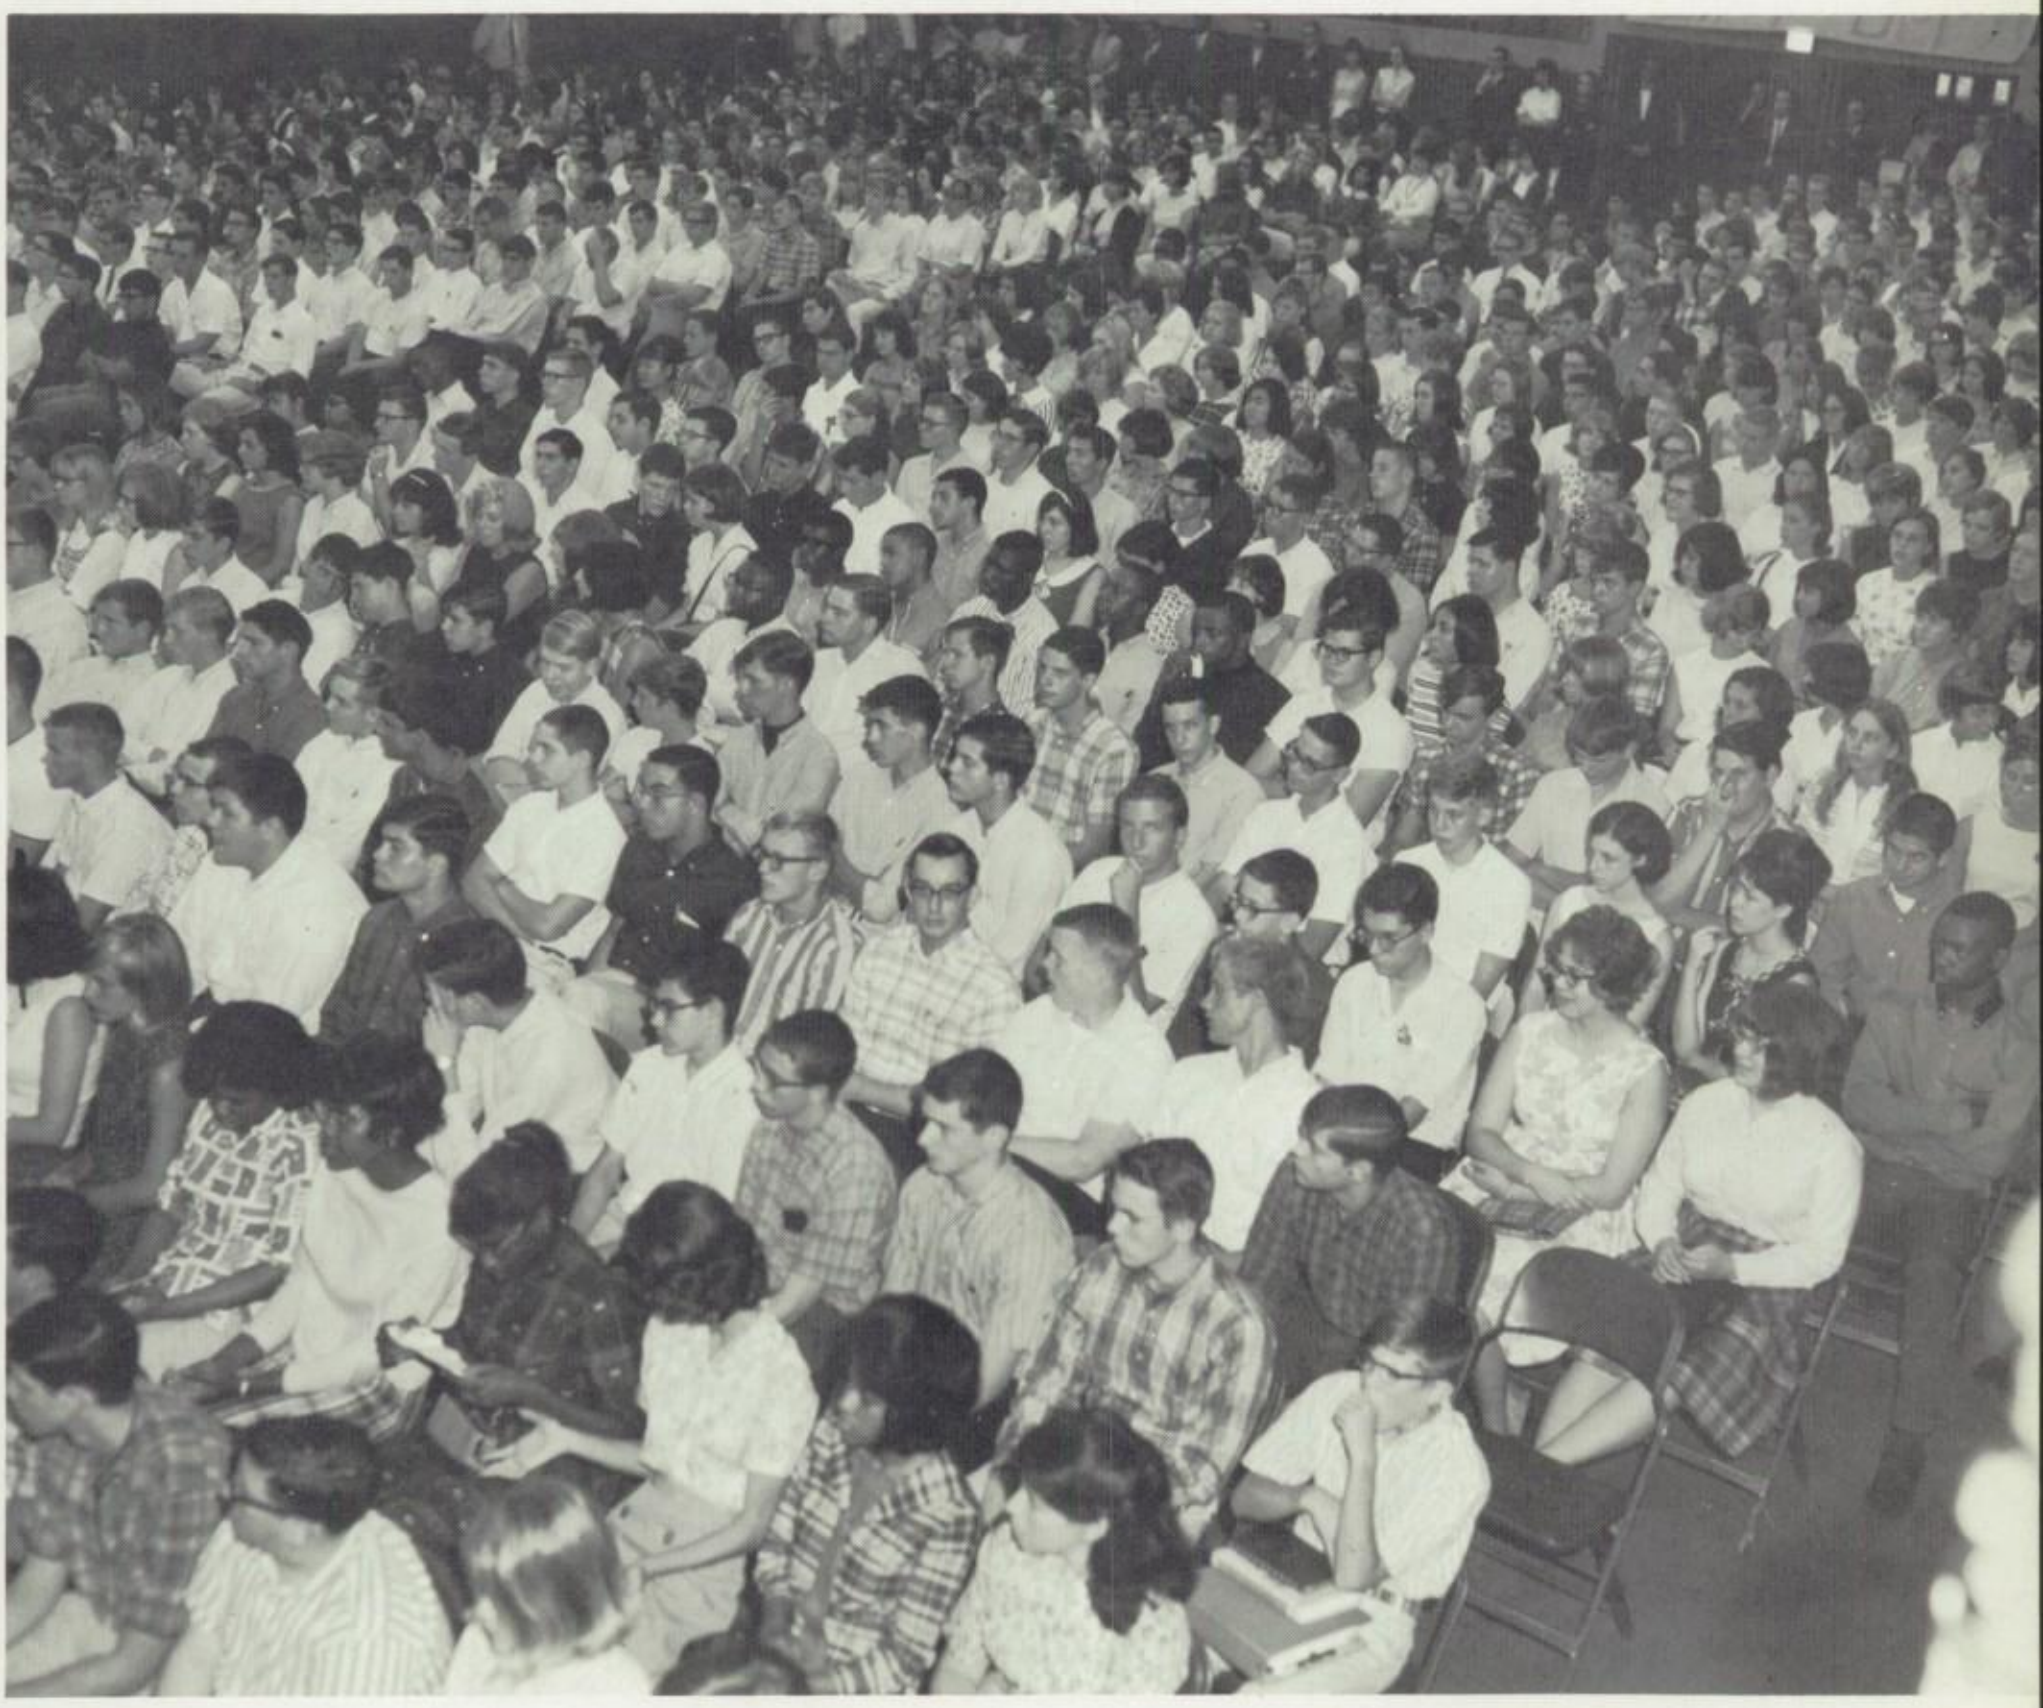
We Poured Over College Catalogs

Along with the fun and expectations of the senior year went important decisions for the future. Whether to attend college, how to choose a suitable college, and how to apply for admission demanded answers. The Guidance Department helped seniors determine for themselves their next few years and possibly their life's occupation.

Students planning careers after graduation were advised by vocational counselor Donald Perigo who, with the senior counselors, arranged for the student aptitude tests. Visiting college representatives and college counselor Miss Mildred Fox were available for consultation to college-bound students. Serving all students, the college and career room furnished books and pamphlets on jobs, and catalogs, yearbooks, and general college references.



Seniors sit on the main floor of Beardsley Gym for the first time at the opening assembly of the school year.
